MR. CLAY'S CORRECT DESCRIPTION OF PROCEEDINGS CONSIDERED.—We have extracted in full, in another column, the speech of Mr. Clay, delivered on the 30th ult. at Lexington, but Mr. Clay did not say all that he could have said, during the Extra Session. The following, in addition to what is there given, was what he might have said, and would have said, had he been addressing the Democracy of Pittsburgh:

On the 4th of June, Mr. CLAY moved to take up the Sub-Treasury bill, and to suspend the rules for that purpose. The motion was carried by a vote of 31 to 20. Mr. CLAY then moved to suspend the rules for the purpose of introducing a bill to repeal the Sub-Treasury law, and so avowedly for the purpose of introducing a National Bank.

A Senatorial Bank remedy proposed. Mr. CLAY then submitted what remedy he proposed. Mr. CLAY said that he was ready to act on it the second day of the session, was but he was met by the cry that it was not time to act on it. He was ready, even the second day of the session, was met by the cry that it was not time to act on it. He was ready, even the second day of the session, was met by the cry that it was not time to act on it. He was ready, even the second day of the session,
