Green Law Victims Two of the gamekeepers other: Report attributes the death of both of them "to their anxiety and dread of mooting their maxter, (who was expected at Hexham park on Saturday, on his return from his Irish estates, but who is not looked for till-this week;) fearing his anger that such extensive depredations should have been allowed among his prefeet, showing that the anxiety of mind which ended in these undergunate men destroying themselves, was caused by the solicitude about the game they had to presorve. It is not long since another gamekeeper of this same Lord Stradford was murdered by pouchers; and, of our memory serves us aright, several transportations beyond the seas were the consequence. Look, then, at the loss of life, the misery, and the expense of the public, in order that this single landlord's game may be preserved. Let it be kept in mind that, during the last ten years, some thirty game keepers have been ders; that, in one year, (namely, 18,3.) there persons were transported, and four thousand five hundred coninurdered, and as many poachers hanged for their murvicted and sentenced to fine and imprisonment in England alone for infringements of the game laws; that the coar of prosecuting the "criminals," and of maintaining their families when thrown upon the parish umounts annually to not less than 100,000 pounds ster ling, not to speak of the immense cost of maintaining those who are transported beyond seas, nor of the wreck and ruin of virtue and happiness to tens o shousands, nor of the brutal and revengeful feelings engendered, and the desperate criminals who are brough into existence and fostered by these laws, and who shall say but that they are one of the greatest curses of our land, and ought, without delay, to be swept off the statute, book forever?—Leeds Times.
