THEY DIE HARD.-We never knew a set of men so-louthe to acknowledge themselves beat as are the whigs in the present contest since the election in New York they have suggested five hundred contingencies by which Clay might still be elected, and they have clung to each with the tenacity of drowning rats.-The intillusion that they havest arted is that the Legislature of South Carolina would give the vote of that State for Mr. Calhoun, and not to Mr. Polk, by which means the election would go to the House, when the friends of Clay and shose of Calhoun uniting, the latter would be made President of the United States .-The hoax is too palpable to deceive the least sagecious. It is like the absurd rumors gotten up by the gamblers on the election results, as to the issue in l'ennsylvania, and the Governor's rejection of the vote of Berks county. We are surprised that sensitole men will manufacture or the veriest durses credit
