A BOY IN FEMALE DRESS IN JACKSON'S CAMP AT NEW ORLEANS

Whilst the troops were in camp at New Orleans, ir 1814, a person dressed in female attire was in th habit of visiting the camps with oranges und other fruit for sale. Some of the soldiers became suspicious that the fruit seller was not a verifable female, au gave such information as made it proper to have the lady taken up and interrogated. When she was brought fore the officers, she was seen to put her hand in her besom. She drew out a written paper which, upon examination turned out to be a certificate from a wide lady. She certified that the bearer was employed by her to assume the female dress, and sell fruit to the troops-that she had three sons in the army, and was forced to sustain herself with meat and bread in their subsistence, and his appearance as a female was her newest styles and most splendid goods that is brought device. The three sons of the lady were looked out; to this market is to be seen at our establishment. We they recognized the hand-writing of their mother, and would invite the attention of purchasers to our present they also knew the youth. Of course the boy was dis- stock, which for variety and richness of style cannot charged, but the message which General Jackson sent to the widow lady reflects everlasting credit upon his ers we are determined not to be out done, as arrangegenerous heart. He sent her word that she need give herself no further uneasiness about a livelihood, in the absence of her sons-that a widow who would furnish three such soldiers should have all that she needed for her support. He had her amply provided for. for her support. He had her amply provided for. Yet there is a man presiding over Tennessee, as this same General Jackson required him (then Elder Jones) to turn out a widow lady from the Church, against whom no charges had been made, and without any trial! Gov Jones denies having told Parson Brownlow any such thing, but Dr Embree and Parson Brown-low prove that he did. Those who know Andrew Jackson would have utterly scouted such a charge, even if Jones and Brownlow had both prefessed to make the statement. But, as the matter stands, General Jackson's true character is illustrtaed by his treatment to the mother of his three soldiers at New Or--Governor Jones' true character is illustrate by Parson Brownlow and Dr Embree
