They met in friendship's holiness, With gentle word and smile, And eye met eye with meaning glance Of kindliness the while; And tho' no passion stirred the heart; The memory of the past Still o'er their kindred souls a shade Of tenderness had cast.

They met again-the serpent too, Her heart at last had wiled, She passed as tho' she know him not, He turned away and smiled! Twas the last ripple of the stream, As the celd ice-king's breath temmed the swift current of its life.

And locked it up in death.

From Arthur's Magazine for January. A MOTHER'S LOOK. There is not a grand, inspiring thought, There is not a truth by wisdom mught, There is not a feeling pure and high, That may not be read in a mother's eye.

And ever since earth began, that look Has been to the wise an open book, To win them back from the lore they prize To the holier lave that edifies.

The "Oldest Inhabitant." - We have finally found out who that much talked-of individual, the "oldest inhabitant," is. An elderly chap, speaking of his great knowledge of the Western country the other day, said that he had "known the Mississippi river ever since it was a small creek!" He's the man.
