In many cases, however, the apparent success is not justly due the scrubbism, but to qualities of a respectable kind which may have happened to be associated with it, and which would have told better without it. Such at least is the conclusion I am disposed to come to, when I consider how frequently I have seen extreme. how frequently I have seen extreme narrowness in sno-ney dealings, and sordidness in expenditure, attended by something like a failure in the great struggles of life. There is an English proverb, that a penny soil never came to twopence; and it is not difficult to see how this should be; for, first, such mean views are very and to should be; for, first, such mean views are very apt to prevent a man from venturing upon perfectly safe enter-prises, calculated to be beneficial to him; and, second, they tend to have the effect of disqualifying himself and all connected with him. and all connected with him for meeting that public favor on which fortune very much depends. hear a man constantly talking with earnestness about pairry profits, or find him unyielding in dealings about mail odd sums, or endeavoring to "shave" as much as cossible off every article he sells and every payment he Arnold's American Lock Manufactory,

Pitt, who had as much occasion as any man could have to see his fellow-creatures in unfavorable lights, nevertheless, declared it to be the result of his experience and that anything else kind generally meant well, and that anything else the exception and not the rule. Hear also what the late amiable Dr Cheyne, the head of the HAVING removed my manufactory from Birming-ham, and located it at the above stand, I would his own life. Speaking of the commencement of his respectfully invite my friends and the public generally career, "I endeavored," he says, "to become acquaint to favor me with a call, for any article in my line, viz: highest rank of the profession, and to discover the names of their success; and I ascertained that, although a man might acquire popularity by various means, he could not recken upon preserving public favor, unless he possessed the respect of his own pro-fession; that if he would effectually guard his own interests, he must in the first place attend to the interests of others; hence I was led carefully to study, and liberally to construe, that part of medical ethics which regulates the conduct of physicians towards each other." Dr Cheyne seems to have strictly followed this rule in the course of that career which terminated so brilliantly, for, in an address preented to him by his brethren on his being forced by ad health to retire, the following passage occurs-"Faithful alike to your patients and your colleagues, ou became pre-eminent without exciting isolosy,"
"Your extensive information and sound particular
