Deaths of Civilians.—While our travellers abroad lament over the declining glories of Amsterdam and Venice, they forget that we have parallels on a smaller scale at home. The little port of Perth Amboy, was once a great seaport of the East. Alexandria, in the District of Columbia, at one time transacted more business than Baltimore. Johnston, once an important place, is now in ruins and the spot on which Roanoke was built is not even known. "So runs the world away."
