In the wild span of mem'ry now circling tie past,

Though endoared, as it is—think much as we may

Then be this my love--'tis a spark of that flame,

Which age upon age cannot snother—
Twas enkindled above—from Heaven it came—
Oh be it, then, mine—dearest mother!

NO HEART ALONE.

O say not we through life must struggle,

The stars look down from the silent heavens

Into the quiet stream, And see themselves from its dewy Jepths

The sky, with its pole or glowing hues, Ever painteth the wave below.

And the sea sends up its mist to form

Bright clouds and the heavenly bows

Thus each of the other doth borrow

Alone, amid life's griefs and perils,

All light from God above,

Yet we may sometimes be his angels,

Then let us learn to heln each other;

Hoping unto the end; Who sees in every man a brother

Shall find in each a friend.

And though all strength still comes from Heaven,
