Who "done" the theatrical critique in the days) that Mrs. Howard was no singer. The same vantages of this Company. sagacious and tasty understrapper has since said too that he likes to see "three Clowns in one Circus." How one and the same head could conceive two such beautiful and wise sayings in a single month is more than I can understand just now. But, if the enterprising manager of the Circus should need a fourth Clown, (a part which this scribbler has been playing in Pittsburgh for some time from a desire to be considered eccentric,) I know, where such a one can be had cheap for eash. He has run his "engagement" here rather long-his disgusting attempts at eccentricity, like the absurd and foolish opinions which he is continually inflicting upon the readers of the Journal, the people are extremely tired of. So he had better engage and play a "real" Clown; if he fails in that he will answer admirably for, carrying water to the horses, or servant to the Ring Master.
