The War with Mexico.

There is a dastardly and unpatriotic spirit displayed by a portion of the pross, which deserves the highest reprobation. We allude to the continuous, systematic, unappeasable determination to fitting our young men from taking up arms. It is but a revival of the same base means that were unged by the prototypes of these prints in the war of 1812.—The self-same denunciations were then the provided as an unprovoked and unrighteous war. Then the arguments were in favor of England's print proposal to the cause was an unprovoked and unrighteous war.
