Even these foundations are very insecure, and it is DEPARTED. surprising that they are more so, with such an im mense weight of stone upon such an unsteady foundation. The streets cross each other at right angles, dividing the whole city into squares. Each one of these squares is called a street, and has a separate name; a serious inconvenience to a stranger in the city.

There is not, I believe, a house in the city without this court, of greater or less dimensions in pro-portion to the size of the building. There is only one door on the lower floor, and none at all on the ontside of the upper story. This door is very strongly built, and high enough for a coach to pass through; it opens into the patico through which you pass to the steps leading to the upper stories, where alone every body lives except the lower noon at 3 o'clock.
