THE HEART AND LYRE. She left her lyre within the hall, When last she parted with her loved, And still it hangs upon the wall-He will not let it be removed. Around the lyre of sweetest tone She twined a wreath of roses fair: And though their lovely hue is goin The withered blossoms still are there. THE PITTSBURGH DAILY MORNING POST.

Prothonotary,

No hand hath touched its silver string Since last she waked a parting lay; To sweep its chords would only bring A tupeless tale of its decay. And there it hangs, slow mouldering, Its sweetness gone, its passions quelled And round it those dead roses cling Like withered hopes, still fondly held.

And his sad mourning heart is such. No happy feeling it affords; It cannot bear the slightest touch Of mirth upon its ruived chords. Her name to him they ne'er repeat, It would but waken thoughts of woe And though 'twas once so very sweet, He could not brook to hear it now

He fixes on that lyre his eye For hours, but never, never speaks nmoved he gazes, silently, And only starts when some chord breaks; It bath an echo in his heart-Both mitely their bereavement bear, In her affliction both had part, And both are left to perish there

From the prems of Mrs. Francis Ann Butler (late Fanny Kemble.

SONNET.

There's is not a fibre in my trembling frame That does not vibrate when thy step draws near There's not a pulse that throbs not when I hear Thy voice, thy breathing, nay, thy very name. When thou art with me, every sense seems dull, And all I am, or know, or feel, is thee; My soul grows faint, my veins run liquid flame, And my bewildered spirit seems to swim In eddying whirls of passion, dizzily. When thou art gone, there creeps into my heart A cold and bitter consciousness of pain: The light, the warmth of life, with thee depart And I sit dreaming o'er and o'er again Thy greeting clasp, thy parting look, and tone; And suddenly I wake—and am alone.
