Within a green umbrageous lair, Bedewed with many a tear, I keep in close comn The Hairstfing of my dear. She offered me her precious ring,

To wear it for her sake, Her watch and drops, and keep the string, Which I refused to take.

It tied her locks of raven hue It stretched from ear to ear, She has my heart, I have in lieu, The Hairstring of my dear.

There is no monarch on his throne, A happier man than I, Altho' I murmer, grieve and moan, Altho' I sob and sigh.

And when I ll part my jewell Jane, Whatever course I'll steer, I'm sure defection will not stain, The Hairstring of my dear.

Q, what afflictions will assail, When Jane and I must part. No cure or counsel will avail, Or help a broken heart.

But let me languish as I will, Without a friend to cheer, I'll have one comfort with me still,
