THE NEWS.

The Hermann sailed from New York on Saturday, with $2,000,000 in specie.

It is announced in letters from Mr. Buchanan that he will be inducted into office Thursday, the 4th of April.

The Senate has confirmed the nomination of ex-Governor Bigler, of California, to be United States Minister Resident at Stockholm.

The Legislature of Ohio will be convened to hold an adjourned session next winter. The new constitution adopted in 1851 made the legislatures biennial, but the framers of it forgot to go over it by an adjournment long.

The barque Shooting Star arrived at New York on Saturday. The latest advices from Pernambuco is the 24th of February. The cholera was prevailing to such an alarming extent that it would seriously interfere with all kinds of business. Several cases of yellow fever had occurred among the shipping, and one had been carried to the hospital.

NEW STATES.

By the next session of Congress new States will probably apply for admission, and we have Minnesota, Kansas, Utah, New Mexico and Oregon. The territory of Oregon could furnish a population sufficiently numerous for a State about Christmas, this year. If the turning reflection of the late census is correct, last week it could have furnished a population sufficiently numerous for a State about the 4th of July. Minnesota will be ready for admission before Oregon, and Kansas will be ready for admission before Minnesota. Utah will be ready for admission before Kansas, and New Mexico will be ready for admission before Utah. Each of these territories will be ready for admission in its turn, with a population sufficiently numerous for a State, and each will be entitled to admission on an equality with the original States. Each will be entitled to two Senators and one Representative in Congress, and to the number of votes in the Electoral College to which the number of its Representatives will entitle it. Each will be entitled to the same number of votes in the Electoral College that Pennsylvania has, or that New York has, or that Ohio has, or that Virginia has, or that Kentucky has, or that Tennessee has, or that Indiana has, or that Illinois has, or that Missouri has, or that Alabama has, or that Mississippi has, or that Louisiana has, or that Texas has, or that Arkansas has, or that Michigan has, or that Florida has, or that Iowa has, or that Wisconsin has, or that California has. Each will be entitled to the same number of votes in the Electoral College that Massachusetts has, or that South Carolina has, or that Vermont has, or that Georgia has, or that New Hampshire has, or that Maine has, or that Rhode Island has, or that Connecticut has, or that New Jersey has, or that Delaware has, or that Maryland has, or that North Carolina has, or that Kentucky has, or that Tennessee has, or that Indiana has, or that Illinois has, or that Missouri has, or that Alabama has, or that Mississippi has, or that Louisiana has, or that Texas has, or that Arkansas has, or that Michigan has, or that Florida has, or that Iowa has, or that Wisconsin has, or that California has. Each will be entitled to the same number of votes in the Electoral College that Pennsylvania has, or that New York has, or that Ohio has, or that Virginia has, or that Kentucky has, or that Tennessee has, or that Indiana has, or that Illinois has, or that Missouri has, or that Alabama has, or that Mississippi has, or that Louisiana has, or that Texas has, or that Arkansas has, or that Michigan has, or that Florida has, or that Iowa has, or that Wisconsin has, or that California has.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Wells, the Democratic candidate for Governor, had no less votes than McIntosh, the fusion candidate. The people's party candidate is the only one crazy. Last year that party ran a ticket in that State about Canal, this year Hall. The latter turning reflection of the late census is correct.

Last week it is stated in the Senate that Kansas is one hour west. How can that be? Kansas is the Democratic State of the Union. With each name will be found a majority of the Democratic vote. The same cannot be said of Pennsylvania by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of New York by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Ohio by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Indiana by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Illinois by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Missouri by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Alabama by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Mississippi by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Louisiana by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Texas by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Arkansas by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Michigan by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Florida by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Iowa by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of Wisconsin by the width of a hair. The same cannot be said of California by the width of a hair
