Mr. Shorter, of Alabama, spoke on the Kansa question. He said that all the Southern States were now united on the Georgia platform, and pledged to resist, even to the dissolution of the Union, this re-fusal of Congress to admit Kansas because of the ex stonce of slavery there. He cared not whother this was a constitutional or a revolutionary right of the South; he was prepared to defend it. He contended that the Lecompton Constitution was legally adopted; it was Republican in form, and Congress has not the power to remand Kaneas to her territorial condition, she being an independent sovereign State, by the consent of Congress. He expressed surprise that Mr. Douglas had abandoned the principles of the Mebraska bill, ficeing before the first gun was fired; and like a Parthian throwing his poisoned arrows

Walker. It had been said that the admission of Kansas would light the flames of civil war; if so, ne thought the refusal to admit her would rather enatisfactory evidence exists that the Constitution framed by the Lecompton Convention is the act and eed of the people of Kansas, or embodies their will. He shows that the Convention was not clothed with ompetent power to establish a Constitution without he assent of Congress, which has been expressly with. neld in this case; hence the Convention only had such power as the Territorial Convention could right-fully confer. and no more, which was to form a Constitution and send it to Congress as a memorial for admission which could be accepted or rejected, as cording as it embodied the papular will. That all the proceedings of the Convention should have been held in strict obedience to the authority of the Teritorial government, while in fact it was declared to be n force, and take effect, in defiance of the authority of the Territorial government, as well as without the consent of Congress; that the only lawful election held on the adoption of the Constitution was that of the 4th of January last, which was in obedience to the law framed by the Territorial Legislature established by Congress, with full legislative power on all rightful subject within the Territory.

Messrs. Collamer and Wade, in submitting their Mr. Green, o. Missouri, from the Committee on Torritories, reported the bill for the admission of views, say that the territorial government of Kansas was never organized as provided in the original act; that is by its own people—but was usurped by a foreign force, conquered and subdued by arms, and a minority installed in power, which has ever since been sustained by the general government, instead of being examined into and corrected. This has been done to establish and perpetuate slavery. The Lecompton Constitution is the result of these proceed ings, and is contrary to the will of a great majority of the people legally expressed, and for Congress in its discretion to consummate this protracted atrocity, especially for such a purpose, is a violation of the fundamental principles of republican government, and can produce no permanent peace or satisfaction to the people of the Territory. In the late territorial election, they have reclaimed their rights, and the territorial government is, for the first time, now moving peaceably in its legitimate sphere to promised freedom. The Lecompton Constitution and its adoption was concocted and executed to supercede the triumph of justice; to admit it by Congress is but to give success to fraud and encouragement to iniquity, and to turn over that people not to an election fairly and legally conducted, but to such State officers and legislators as Calboun shall heroafter
