OF FAYETTE COUNTY.

THE KANSAS DIFFICULTY. We publish in this morning's Post a bill to be introduced by Hon. Wm. Montgomery, of Pennsylvania, as a basis of the settlement of the Kansas question. The bill contains several this long discussed and difficult question. It around him, and has hitherto been very highly admits Kansas to the Federal Union, and at respected. the same time, fully and fairly provides that the citizens of the new State shall at once have the power to make such alterations and amendments in its constitution, as the majority of the people shall approve. This is certainly fair and just, and Democratic. Un- they get there." der such a bill as this the people of Kansas can decide upon their own domestic institutions without interference, either directly or indirectly, either by agitation or by law. By its enactment the people of Kans s would be maintained in all their federal rights, and they would be let alone in all their State rights Independent of all constitutional inhibition. all history, and the laws of nature and of nations, abound with proofs, that one people or one State have no right to interfere with the political, social or religious institutions and Montgomery's bill appears to us to secure most fully, and unreservedly to the people of Kansas, the exercise of their rights as a State.

The bill of which we speak is perhaps in some sense a compromise, but it is such a compromise as every true and patriotic lover of his country can conscientiously agree to. It takes away no right; it commits no wrong. Where it is contended that wrong has been already committed, this bill is designed directly and fair to make that wrong right.

The President recommends that the people of Kansas may be empowered to alter or amend the constitution of the State, at any time after admission; against th's, the opponents of the Lecompton constitution contend that the pro-slavery men may, through Calhoun, secure the Legislature and State officers who refuse to call a convention, and thus baffle the will of the people for an indefinite period. This bill makes it obligatory to call an extra session within twenty days, and thus disposes of an anticipated difficulty, and secures to the people their great right of deciding for themselves upon their own institutions. Mr. Montgomery who proposes this bill, is strong man. He is new in the political arena of Washington City, and in the classification made by the enemics of the adminis tration-not its friends-has been set down as a Pennsylvania Democrat opposed to the policy of the President. The introduction of this bill shows that, far from being opposed to Mr. Buchanan, he is his warm and ardent friend, and desires that his recommendation that Kansas may be enabled to alter or amend her constitution at will, should be fixed beyond a peradventure. In common with every Democrat he desires that this Kansas question, which has so long and so uselessly agitated the country, should be settled, and settled upon a democratic basis. All the questions which have arisen from time to time out of slavery issues, have been happily put an end to by fair and manly compromise. Faction and fanats icism have always endeavored in this matter to shake the Union to its centre, but it has al ways been the proud boast of the Democratic party to guard the rights of the cit zens, which were guaranteed by that constitution | visitor: which was framed in the purer days of the republic, when men who had fought shoulder to shoulder trusted each other, and imposed no unwholesome restrictions in legislative

CONSUMPTION OF GAS .- The following statisics afford a very reliable idea of the enormous onsumption of gas, and of the extent to which this branch of industry has attained. Muspratt in speaking of the influence of chemistry, says that in England six million tons of coal are an nually consumed in the manufacture of gas, and from twelve million to fifteen million pounds sterling are expended in its production. London alone five hundred thousand tons of coal are annually used, producing four and a half billion cubic feet of gas, and half a million chaldrous of coke; of the latter, about a quarter part s consumed in manufacturing the gas, and the remainder is sold for fuel. Upwards of half a million houses in London burn gas, and the ength of the main arteries for conveying it is sixteen hundred miles. The capital employed in the metropolis for the production of gas is twen ty million dollars The manufacture of coal gas the most striking instances of the triumphs science when enlisted in the cause of civilization Looking at it as a whole, and regarding the ingenuity evinced in the construction of ap paratus, the chemical skill and beauty displayed the process, and the very valuable purposes to which it is applied, it forms one of the most beautiful, curious, and useful of modern manu factures. Having finished a defense of Northern laborers Mr. Hamlin proceeded to examine Mr. Hammond's assertion that the wealth of the nation consists in xports, and denying the truth of the proposition, owing that the hundred millions of cotton exported by the South no more proved that that sum rep resents her surplus profit, after paying all demands aforesaid sight be regarded as adopted with all Northern surplus of wealth. The exports have t the product of its exports, and yet Mr. Hammond, assuming $212,000,000 as the total exports of the South, claims that amount as surplus wealth. [Mr. Hamlin] hight, with as much propriety, contend that the amount of imports show a surpluwealth, inasmuch as the imports assume the ability to produce enough to balance the imports. Hamlin proceeded to show the fallacy of both positions, citing statistical tables, comparing the xports and imports of the North and South. Ie next proceeded to examine the true sources of ational wealth, as indicated by schools, population griculture, manufactures, shipping, railroads, ca ive strength of the two sections in these resource n manufactures. The aggregate net profit of the outh was seventy nine millions, and of the North three hundred and seventy-six millions. As to the sapacity to build ships and railroads and for war, he denied that these were the true indices of national greatness, though they were to some extent; taking them as such, he showed by figures a preponderance n favor of the North of ten to one in ship tonnage, and unward of five to one in railroads, while as t capacity for war, he showed that in the Revolutionary war the North contributed 218,000 men to 71,000 men by the South. He admitted that Southerner were a great people with respect to a defensive war, but he did not think that their peculiar institution would be harmless in such an event. From the Armstrong Democrat-Extra Destructive Fire in Kittauning --- Th Court House in Ruins. KITTANNING, Wednesday Afternoon March 10, 1858. To-day at about half-past twelve o'clock, just Court adjourned, fire was discovered between the ceiling and roof of the Court House, but when seen had made such progress that any effort to extinguish t proved abortive. As quickly as possible, water was procured, but from the location of the fire nothing could be done, and but a few moments sufficed for the dames to drive away those who were trying The efforts of the officers were directed to saving the books and papers, which was accomplished without any material loss, in a very short time. For a short time there was danger of the Jail and the Sheriff's house taking fire from the burning building, but a plentiful supply of water thrown upon matting spread upon the roof prevented the catas-

The fire is supposed to have originated from a defect near the roof, in the flue of one of the furnaces. It originated immediately over the court room. The building is now, at three o'clock P. M., a mass of smouldering ruins. The loss will be about $35,000. There was no insurance on the building.
