New York, April 12, 1856.

Dear Sir:—Having a great many rats around my stable and shop, I thought I would try your Rat Exterminator, and bought one of your boxes, and fixed it according to your directions. The next morning I found over one hundred and fifty dead rats. I take pleasure in saying, that it will do more than you say it will. I have also tried it on steamboats, and satisfied them that it is the greatest thing of the age.

ral. As I previously announced to you, that warrant only included Orsini and Pierri. The punishment of De Rudio is commuted into penal servitude for life. Since their condemnation it was judged proper to employ the strait waistcoat with the three convicts as a precautionary measure against any possible act of violence either on themselves or n those placed in contact with them. The reprieve of De Rudio rendered that restraint no onger necessary, and the Governor did not delay a moment in giving orders to free him from it. When the turnkeys who were charged with the duty entered De Rudio's cell, they found him buried in sleep. They shook him once or twice before he awoke; when he opened his eyes and sat up on his pallet, he stared fearfully at them, and for a moment appeared bewildered. He thought they came to announce that his last noment had arrived, and he recoiled from their ouch. "Don't be afraid," they said, "don't be afraid, we are not going to injure you; far from it. We bring you good news; you are to have a commutation of punishment, and we are going to take off your camisole de force, (straight waistcoat)." You need hardly be told what the feelings of the poor wretch were. It is said that he hummed an air during the operation. If the execution did not take place yesterday, instead f to-day, it was in no wise owing to the superstitions feeling about Friday; but it happened that the Friday of this week followed the Thursday of Mi-Careme (Mid-Lent,) and it was very properly felt to be improper that two men should ie on the scaffold at the same time, in the same suburb, and the same streets that were thronged with masks, revellers and mummers; that within sight of the guillotine yawning for its prey the most fantastic costumes should figure; that the oyous sound of horns and trumpets, and the ibes and laughter of those who were returning rom festivities prolonged till the dawn, should contrast with the death knell of the prison chapel; that the Descente de la Courtille should pass side by side with the scaffold. For these reasons the execution was postponed a day. Since the trial you are aware that the prisoners were transferred from the Conciergerie -to .the condemned prison known as the Nouveau Bicetre, in the Place de la Roquette. In former times the Place de la Greve, now Place de l'Hotel de Ville, was the spot where criminals were put to death. Indeed, it might well be called the Field of Blood; its pavement has been many times stained with the blood of the victims of all revolutions, as well as of those who have fallen by the hand of justice. Since the completion of the two prisons at the extremity of the Rue de la Requette, it is in front of these buildings in the small square which separates them, that quette extends from the Place de la Bastile to the Barrierre d'Aunay on the extreme Boulevard, close to the famous burial-ground of Pere la Chaise. About half-way, and on the left, the Rue Popincourt joins it at right angles, and is continued on the other side in a straight line in the Rue de Basfroid. From that point of intersection to its extremity nothing is calculated to inspire more melanonely thoughts than that street. You feel long before you emerge on to the Boulevard that you are approaching the great receptacle of the dead; more than half the upper part of La Roquette is filled with the shops of dealers in tombs, head-stones, coffins, and rise gloomily the two large prisons, and from the prisons to the cometery is little more than a step. The population in this part of Paris is dense; the long streets of Reuilly, Piopus, Charenton, and last, not least, the famous fabourg and street of St. Antoine, with their many tributaries, converge to the Place do la Bastile on one side, and the Boulevard Beaumarchais, with the numerous horoughfares, debouches on the other; while the Rue de la Roquette, as a mid-channel, runs, as I have said, from the Bastile to the prisons. For the last two nights the Place de la Roquette and the streets contiguous were covered with a multitude, who braved the intense cold and wet vigil the whole of last night were almost beyond calculatión.

This morning the weather was bitterly cold, and the ground wet, from the snow which had fallen. The sky was covered with clouds of a slate color, and under that dismal canopy of dark gray mist, transparent like funeral crape, were part of the city were deserted, but as you neared the quarter contiguous to the prison, detached squads of sergents-de-ville might be seen moving towards the same direction, the occasional flash of bayonets in the gaslight was discernible, and nearer still the vague mass, without form or outline, and heaving to and fro, showed that the awful moment was approaching. Now and then a butcher's or a marke, gardener's cart, with its red lamp in front, rolled heavily along, and with difficulty made its way through the crowd. Many of the spectators had brought their breakfasts with them; they had their loaves under their arms, their pipes in their mouths. Some men were grave and serious, and spoke in a low tone of voice; others jested and laughed, and many observed that the prisoners well deserved their fate. About fifteen paces from the gate of the prison the scaffold was erected, and on it rose the instrument of death, the name of which recalls so many terrible associations. There it stood on its platform like a ladder without steps; the block, with the hole for the head to enter, of triangular shape, with its edge like a razor's; hard by it, the shall for the body after decapitation; and in front, the basket for the head; the cord by which the blade is kept suspended; in the dismal glimmering of a winter's morning, all presented a most hideous spectacle. At five o'clock, the sound of bugles and drums was heard in all the passages issuing on the Place de la Roquette. In a few minutes several squadwrapped in their blue or white cloaks, and the dragoons' helmets gleaming in the lamplight. The whole of the 3d Hussars, two squadrons of heavy horse, two squadrons of mounted Gendar-They then wheeled round, and, separating into several detachments, swept the Place and the streets close to it, and quietly but firmly compelled the multitude to fall back to the north side of the Rue St. Maur, and the south of the Rues Popincourt and Basfroid, where they were kept at a respectful distance by two battalions of infantry, supported by divers sections of cavalry and squads of sergens-de-ville. The place of execution was occupied by cavalry, as well as the space which runs round both prisons. In less than half an hour numerous detachments of infantry, preceded by squads of sergens de-ville to clear the way, took possession of all the points of Faubourg St. Autoine, issuing on the ELT HOOKS—For splicing India Rubber or Leather Belting—a supply of the different sizes, just received and for sale, by J. & H.
