FOR CANAL CONMISSIONER, WESTLEY FROST, OF FAYETTE COUNTY.

THE LIQUOR BILL The amendments, offered by Senator Gazzam in the Senate, to the new liquor law, have not been agreed to by the House, which pres cludes the necessity, at present, of any extended remarks concarning them. We may say that in Ohio, a law containing provisions similar to those introduced by Senator Guzzam, was found not to work, well in practice. A Committee of Conference has been appointed upon the liquor bill, as the Senate invisted upon the amendments. If the amendments should be finally agreed to, some one should move to change the provision, which restricts ing a diploma from a college or university in this State, in which the science of chemistry is taught." The Utah Commissioners. Colonel Ben. McCullough and Governor Powell, the Commissioners lately appointed by the President to treat with Brigham Young, passed through Cincinnati on Wednesday morning, on their way to the West. No better men could have been selected for the important trust committed to their hands; and, if it be possible to settle with the rebellious Mormons, by the use of any other means than powder and lead we shall soon hear of a successful arrangement, effected through the agency of McCullough and Powell. 'The Territory of Utah is, and has been for a long time in a state of rebellion; the laws of the United States have been trampled under foot, and the officers of our Government insulted and driven from their posts. Nevertheless, it is not impossible, but, on the contrary, highly probable, that the newly appointed Commissioners, who are understood to be invested with extraordinary discretionary power, will be able to effect a peaceable solution of one of the most difficult and perplexing questions ever presented for the consideration of the new firm in this day's paper.

The late news from Utah indicates that are so unanimous for war, why is it necessary to hold mass meetings to sustain the prophet?

"My friends, an unerring touchstone of the quality of our intelligence as citizens, and our devotion to duty as such, is now presented us in the times. It has become apparent in the Everybody in Pittsburgh is acquainted scenes through which the country has passed with Cartwright's long established cutlery and within the last few years, that if we are still to we forget in the fullness of our national and in dividual prosperity the lessons which history this city of manufacturing elegant cuttery, this connection. Popular governments ex isted in ancient times, but flourished only while the people remained intelligent, and oher shed deep reverence for law. When from sec tional animosity the members of those ancient commonwealths began to lose sight of the sol mn engagements upon which they confederated ogether, a mutual want of confidence succeed ed; the vital spirit of system became extinct and they naturally fell asunder from the want of any adequate principle of cohesion. From dis-regard of law the Republics of Greece and Rome passed first into anarchy, and then into despotic governments. All governments up to that of the British Empire may be said to hav perished from a similar cause.

"The English government has been the most een recognized as a government of law, and ha maintained this character in all its departments stock, which is now one of the largest and The English judiciary is independent of the crown. It is a fixture there, and the light of its lofty intelligence and purity have been reflected here. While the English government is the only approximation on that side of the water to the form of a representative republic, ours is an improvement on that system. The success of our experiment, which differs chiefly from hers in he extent of the power exercised by the reopla brough their representatives, is in the same pro portion, still more dependent upon a faithful aderence, under all circumstances of prosperou and adverse fortune, and with all classes of citi cens, to the precepts of law, in its every appli ation, municipal and constitutional. By virtue f this obedience we have extended our territory emirace an empire, while our prosperity mexampled. In all those great marches of progress which pre eminently distinguished the age, our country has participated with brilliant renown. With political institutions which in exellence surpass those of any other nation, the energy of our people is greater in every depart-While the ships of our commerce are dotting every sea, the annual productions of our industrial pursuits at home offer marvels to the contemplation. In the year 1789, in which the constitution was launched upon its glorious desliny, the aggregate of the experts and imports of the thirteen colonies, with a population of four millions, was less in value than fifty millions f dollars. In 1853, while the population had ncreased more than six fold, our commerce had acreased in double that ratio, and became welve times as great. In that time an Empire s great as the Roman had been reclaimed from he wilderness, and the vast results of our in lustry now outstrip the slow computations of the conomist. The values imparted at the same time to raw materials, by processes in manufacures, mining, and the mechanic arts, have been out little inferior, and in both cases are counted by hundreds of millions. It is also true all the time, that while in no country is so large a portion of liberty enjoyed, in none is labor so well paid. No other on the face of the globe can boast a people so well fed, so well dressed, so well educated, and provided with such noble institutions of charity and benevolence. We are. therefore, in all its most important elements, in the van of modern civilization. Now this high position has been attained by the institutions which were founded by the Fathers of the Dem ocratic party, and transmitted to us through the integrity of its organization and the fidelity of its representatives. The party of the present day will fail in its duty to its successors, fail hopelessly and lamentably-if it permits its great trust to be impaired in its hands. The time is not far distant when in our rapid career we shall number fifty States, and a population of sixty millions. With this prospective view the necessity for strict construction and inflexible devotion to law presents itself with irresistible force. It is in a strict obedience to all the requirements of the fundamental law, framed with so much wisdom by our ancestors, that the only exists, and upon the continuance of that Union the further progress of civilization and the hopes of the world may be said to hang.
