This last commission had been so far executed at Upon the deck of this boat, at the moment we present the scene to the reader, stood five individuals, alike engaged in watching a group of persons, mostly females, who were slowly approaching the landing. Of these five, one was a stout, sleek negro, in partial livery, and evidently a house or body servant; three were boatmen and borderers, as indicated by their rough, bronzed visages and coarse attire; but the fifth was a young man, some two-and-twenty years of age, of a fine commanding person, and a clear, open, intelligent countenance; and in the lefty carriage of his head-in the gleam of his large, bright, hazel eye—there was something which denoted one of superior mind; but as we shall have occasion in he course of our narrative to fully set forth who and present, and turn to the approaching group, whom he seamed to regard with lively interest.

Of this group, composed of a middle-aged man and four females, with a black female servant fol lowing some five or six paces in the rear, there was one whom the most casual eye would have singled ture, which, besides being beautiful in every linea-ment, rarely fails to affect the beholder with some-

"Well, aunt," returned Blanche, with a light like a gay and thoughtless girl, when you ought to be serious. Because you have come safe thus far, through a partially settled country, you think, per-haps, your own pretty face will ward off danger in the more perilous wilderness-but I warn you that a fearful journey is before you! Scarcely a boat de-
