LOOKING TO THE FUTURE. The people of the country, and especially that large and most intelligent class who wisely take a personal interest in national politics, and who desire to see the country made prosperous by national, and not local or sectional measures, are beginning seriously to turn their attention to the political aspect of the future. The questions are beginning to be agitated as to who will be the next candidates for the Presidency of these United States, and what shall be the issues of its columns, and thirdly, fr the E glich Cothe campaign of 1860.
