The Leap for Life.

We presume there are but few, if any. among our readers who are not familiar with the exploit of Putnam, in riding his horse down the steep declivity at Horse-Real Estate and Insurance Agent, neck, in the endeavor to escape from the British troops. It is "famed in story;" has been illustrated time and again by the pen and peneil; has been dramatized, and, the public eye, until the merest schoolboy REAL ESTATE AGENT, NO 50 WATER STREET, is as familiar with the incident as with his alphabet. Yet it is by no means comparable with feats of a similar character, per formed by men of less notoriety, but of side equal strong nerve and desperate courage, which have not attracted a tithe of the admiration and eclat which have been youch. safed to Putnam's exploit.

At the siege of Fort Henry, near Wheeling, by a band of Indians, under the view, they returned to the investment of infamous Simon Girty, Major Samuel Me-'ulloch performed an act of daring-nay, desperate horsemanship-which has seldom, if ever, been equaled by man or hibited in its defense, together with the beast, and before which the effort of the Pomfret hero pales into insignificance.— the hid witnessed, disheartened Let us turn to the record. Fort Henry was situated about a quarter

All, pin. except their daring leader, succeeded in R was as well known to the Indians as to the whites for his deeds of prowess, and his name was associated in their minds with ome of the most bloody fights in which the white and red men had contended. To ecure him alive, therefore, that they night glut their vengeance upon him, was the earnest desire of the Indians, and to this end they put forth the most superhuman exertions. There were very few among their number who had not lost a elative by the unerring aim and skill of he fearless woodsman, and they cherishd towards him an almost phrenzied hatred, which could only be satisfied in his tortures at the stake. With such feelings and incentives, they rowded around him as he dashed forward in the rear of his men, and succeeded in cutting him off from the gate. Finding imself unable, after the most strenuous exertions, to accomplish his entrance, and sceing the uselessness of a conflict with such a force opposed to him, he suddenly wheeled his horse and fled in the direction of Wheeling Hill at his utmost speed. A cloud of warriors started up at his approach, and cut off his retreat in this direction, driving him back upon another party who blocked up the path behind; while a third closed in upon him on one of the other sides of the square. The fourth and open side was in the direction of the brow of a precipitous ledge of rocks, nearly one hundred and fifty feet in height, at the foot of which flowed the waters of Wheeling Creek. As he momentarily halted and took a rapid survey of the dangers which surrounded him on all sides, he felt that his chance was indeed a desperate one. The Indians had not fired a shot, and he well knew what this portend-

While such has been the progress forward, of many of the fruits, others have greatly deteriorated, or progressed backward. Not long since, some wheat kernlels were found in the coffin of one of the Gallie Kings, who had been buried fourteen hundred years. The wheat, in its botanical character, is identified with the wheat of the present day; and yet on being planted, it produced from sixteen to twenty stalks, to each grain; and had an verage of twenty more grains to a stalk, and each grain heavier than our common

This shows that wheat culture has dwarfed the crop in the last fourteen centuries so as to almost make the plant a diferent species; and every year's cropping is making it less, and less likely that we shall keep even the present deteriorated article good without constant care and skill in the use of fertilizers, and in the se-ection of seed. The descendants of vegetables, as well is of animals, are the representatives of their angestors. If consumption, scrofula, or other disease exist in the parent, it will appear in the children; and though it may ometimes pass over a single generation, it is sure to appear in the next. It is so with the vegetables: sow peas, full of bugs and you will get buggy peas; sow wheat, full of weavil and smut, and you will reap a rich crop of weavil and smut,; sow shriveled and late ripened wheat, and it will require a miraele to produce a good
