Mr. Lovejoy-Then I hope the gentleman does not charge us with fillibustoring. Mr. J. Glancy Jones—I have seen a good deal of it on both sides of the House, and not a little this morning in the war speech of my friend from Massachusetts, [Mr. Burlingame.]
Mr. Lovejoy—You have not seen it on this side of the House on any single appropriation

Mr. J. Glancy Jones—I have heard within the last half hour a most tremendous demonstration of what I call fillibustering-a war speech on the loan bill, while I know that the gentleman who made it will not go for paying expenses. There is not a constituency of five men on that side of the House who would support a war measure before the country, or vote money to pay for it, if I were to bring in a bill to morrow asking for money, and men to use it. I do no blame them for it. Experience has taught u that the best way to get along is to insist upon cur rights at all hazards, and to ask for nothing but what is right. A war speech in time of peace is very safe, and naturally, like froth works itself off. I will hold myself ready to vote for war, and to vote for supplies to maintain it, whenever I think the honor of the country is assailed or touched.

Mr. Kunkel, of Pennsylvania-So will we. Mr. J. Glancy Jones-But you would not now be found voting to give the President of the United States authority to redress instantly the first insult offered to our flag on every sea. I am ready to give the President money and men to from making war speeches, only to end in words, and find fault with such of my friends on the other side of the House who indulge in this harmless amusement for Buncombe. I could not let the opportunity pass without this remark, that it is rather inconsistent in a gentleman to rise here in this body—and the country will fully appreciate it-and assail the Executive of the United States, no matter to what party he may belong, for not prosecuting a war, when that gentleman, by virtue of his being a member of Congress, is expected to know that, under the enlous reserve of the Constitution of the United States, the Executive has not the power to lift one finger in hostility without the action of Congress; and still worse is it when that gentleman would not vote to give him that power to-day. If the gentleman means what he says, why does he not vote to give the Executive power? The to do either, is a species of demonstration which I should be sorry to see often exhibted here by friend or foe, and must certainly (I say it with all due personal regard for my friend) bring abroad, wherever it is understood. I now send to the Clerk's desk the referred-to tabular statement of the estimated receipts and expenditures for the next two quarters-that is, from now until the 1st of January next; and also for the four quarters of the current fiscal year-actual and estimated: RECEIPTS.

Estimated from customs, public Jands and miscellaneous, from July 1, 1858, to December 31, 1858 $25,000,000 00 15,000,000 00

Experience has taught us, however, especially under our present mint system, that we ought at all times to have a balance of $5,000,000 on hand in the treasury in order to work the machinery of the treasury department. We shall therefore, be short $8,000,000 of a good working ballance; but it will be safe for months to rest it. I propose that the House pass this bill in its present shape, providing 000 for fifteen years, and send it to the Senate. By the time the Senate takes action upon it it will be able to figure up the exact amount of the appropriations made, and if it be needed the Senate can increase it, and I shall ask the House to concur in such increase as they may propose on this basis. I have submitted these remarks hastily, and may modify them somewhat hereafter, in order to enforce and explain more fully

Delaware Division The Philadelphia Ledger of Monday gives

Some little feeling was manifested on Saturday when a report obtained circulation that the Sunbury and Eric Railroad Company, to whom all the State canals, resold the Delaware division to a company of ten or twelve of our leading capitalists, namely, J. V. Williamson. A. S. & G. Longstreth, the Messrs. Borie. Chas. Henry Figher, Judge Hepburne, Ephriam March, of New Jersey, and some others. Although it was known that the Sunbury and Erle Railroad Company, was on the market with this work, the announcement on Saturday that it had been sold to the parties named, created surprise, because all eyes were turned to the Lebigh Navigation Company as the probable purchaser, the Division being a connecting link with their works and the tide water on the Delaware. It was to any other parties. The capital of the Lehigh-Navigation Company being large, and more about this city, the disappointment was widely extended and keenly felt. We do not know, however, if the Lehigh Navigation Company should feel that they have lost a desirable bar-gain, that they have any but themselves to lame. We are assured that the Sunbury and Eric Reilroad Company desired them to become the purchasers, and solicited them to make an offer by a given day, as other parties were negotiating with them and wished to conclude a con-tract. Prominent among these are sewing machines, which have been sold in this country for many years. But the high price of the article has, in a great measure, placed it almost entirely out of the reach of those whom it should most benefit those poor semp. stresses who are obliged to earn a subsistence by untiring industry. How A BESTISH MERCHANT SAVED HIS COUN-TEX.—In the year 1586 7, when Spain under Philip II was preparing the so-called invincible armada for the invasion of England, the Court of England saw that if King Philip's fleet was In condition to conquer England, he would not abandon the design for Mary being put out of the way, and that he certainly designed to conover it for himself, and not for another. So oriers were given to make all possible haste with the fleet. Yet they were so little prepared for such an invasion, that though they had then twenty good vessels on the stocks, it was not possible to get them in a condition to serve that ummer, and the design of Spain was to sail over in 1587. So unless by corruption or any ther method, the attempt could be put off for that year, there was no strength ready to resist so powerful a fleet. But when it seemed not possible to prevent the present execution of so great a design, a merchant of London, to their surprise, undertook it. He was well acquainted already hung four of the culprits.
