PENNSYLVANIA MANUFACTURES --BEAVER BUCKETS.

The village of Fallston is not a handsome Fallston, with its single street between the river and the hill, squeezed in between the most important of the little towns which have grown up around the mouth of the Beaver. The hill which towers above it is full of excellent coal and limestone which traverses not a stones throw down hill to the place of Philadelphia are quoted the same as the Pitts- New York and Philadelphia markets. point. A large flouring mill, Mr. John Pugh's, an extensive wire factory, Messrs. Beaver river, which, in the distance of five railes from its mouth amounts to sixty-nine feet, affords an immense motive power at very little cost. By water, from the very doors of the mills, there is a medium of transporta-

At an early day skillful mechanics appreciated the value of the water power of the and kindred banks. Beaver and took advantage of it. It was at Fallston that the first manufactory of PATENT TUBS AND BUCKETS was established in the western country and has been successfully carried on for a period of more than thirty years. Mr. Amos Miner, of Onondaga county, New York, whence he removed to Illinois, was the inventor and patentce of several mechanical improvements of great value. Among these were Miner's Patent Wheel Head, a celebrated article in its day, but since supplanted by more modern improvements in machinery, Miner's Patent Window Sash, and Miner's Patent Buckets and Tubs. In 1826, his son, in partnership with Mr. Champlain, established a factory at the falls of Beaver, which has since been tensively carried on by Messrs. Miner & Merrick. By the skillful adaptation of machinery, by economy of all kinds in the production, and by careful, personal superintendence on "Beaver Buckets," have acquired, renders it

The front part of this building, is a fire proof warehouse, for storing manufactured stock. A few rods above the Bucket Factory, are two Tub Factories-one 30 by 50 feet, with a slate roof and fire proof-the is driven two of Ira Jagger's patent resaction iron wheels, one 5 feet, and the other 4 feet in diameter, each of about 40 horse power The fall of the water as now applied, is 15 feet, but the proprietors are about increasing it 4 feet, which will place their machinery beyond the contingency of stoppage from back water. Last year but a single day was lost on this account, notwithstanding the very high stage of the river frequently during the season. Everything about the entire establishment is very complete. Attached to the water wheels are powerful force pumps, and a supply of hose and nozzles by means of which, in case of fire, water can be thrown to all parts of the buildings. The establishment employs about 30 hands, and can turn out nine hundred buckets and forty tubs for a day's work. So completely is the machinery adapted to the intended purpose, that few human hands produce this immense product. About 100,-000 cubic feet of the best quality of pine timber is annually made into tubs and buckets. The boops, nails and handles, are of the best iron, and are made at the works. The iron is procured in Pittsburgh, and the wire next door to the factory. The long experience, which Messrs. Miner and Merrick have had in this branch of manufacturing, the skillful appliances of their machinery, the cheapness of matter of general interest. motive power, and the fact that they give their own personal attention to the business, rens der it certain that they can manufacture these but adopt unsound premises, and consequently articles cheaper than any body else in the national have the advantage of the Washington West. Wrought Iron Rolled Railway Chairs, with Double Continuous Lips. The process for the successful accomplishment of this feat in wrought iron, has recently been patented by James Millikin, Esq., of Philadelphia, and the chairs are now produced in great perfection by the Phonix Iron Company of that oity. These chairs are a desideratum long required in the perfection of railway joints. They are rolled over a mandril, which is the exact form then remain unpaid to that amount. There is of the flanges of the rail, and are finished with a base of seven and one-half inches, and with solid double continuous lips, which fit and clamp tightly any form or any size of rails. The wide base resting on the cross-ties, or continuous bearing, gives the rail a firm support, and prevents it from einking into the wood, while the perfect fit of the lips of the chair over the flanges of the rail forms a sleeve, which holds the rail firmly in its place and prevents vertical motion under the weight of approaching trains of cars. The perfection of the sleeve principle is such that this chair has been used for the purpose of suspending the joints of rails between the cross tice, thus furnishing a joint of sufficient elasticity to prevent the "battering of rails" at the ends, which, by all former claims, had not been bviated. When designed to used in this manner, the chairs are rolled to any required thickness which may be found necessary, to give equal strength and rigidity with any other part soon be ready for publication.
