THE TARIFF AND DIRECT TAXES. The rapid, but unavoidable, increase of the expenditures of the federal government induces men to look with more interest to the sources of federal revenue, than they have for many years. Everything having relation | vent of a distinguished stranger. to the treasury and its replenishment, attracts the earnest attention of those who have made political economy their study, as well as those who have made more party politics their trade. As usual, the Republican papers seek t pass the Tariff issue to the damage of the Democratic party, not knowing nor earing what is the true policy for the nation. The New York Herald says-" If Free Trade is the true doctrine, the revenue duties are as impolitic, as unjust, as protection."

The Democratic party, having had the control of the government for'fifty out of sixty vears,-having had to raise the money to pay the expenses of the government in peace and in war, will hardly be frightened from the even tenor of its way by the petty taunts and and more triffing logic of the Republican press. The Democratic party has planted itself on the only sure ground that a national party ever can occupy—it does not adopt free trade as the "true doctrine"-but it has unchangingly held that a tariff for revenue, with incidental protection to our own industry, was the proper policy for the federal government. Such has been the doctrine of the Democratic party, and its practice has conformed to it. We do not think there is any such thing as a purely Free Trade party-ready to abolish all custom, and fall back upon direct taxes for the expenses of the general government in this country. Those who accept Free Trade as correct in theory are by no means ready to the Keystone's magic wealth-by the "Pennsylput it into practical effect, if they possessed the power. The New York Economist, a commercial paper of great extent and influence, thus reasons :-- "When the question for a consolidated government is to raise money for its support, there is no question, but direct taxation is the true mode. But that is not the case in the United States. The only means of independent action of which the federal government is possessed, is the right rendered this right, and came to depend upon the States to furnish their quota for the federal
