LEBANON DEMOCRAT.

"Intelligence is the life of liberty."

R. J. SKINNER,

Proposes publishing weekly, in the Borough of Lebanon,

AN ENGLISH NEWSPAPER,

TO BE ENTITLED THE

LEBANON DEMOCRAT.

AN avowal of political sentiments may with propriety be expected to accompany a solicitation for patronage. The principles of the Editor are decidedly democratic:—it shall be his constant endeavor to keep the rights and interest of the people in view, and to preserve the purity of our republican form of government.

The Editor, under an impression that the citizens of Lebanon county are desirous of having an English paper printed in their own county, flatters himself that they will liberally patronize the "Lebanon Democrat."

While Congress or the Legislature may be in session, the Editor will have correspondents at the city of Washington and at Harrisburg, who will furnish him regularly with the proceedings of those bodies.

Internal improvements, agriculture, manufactures, the arts, the sciences and literature generally, are subjects that will be noticed in as comprehensive a manner as the limits of the paper will admit.

An abstract of the prices current at Philadelphia and Baltimore, will appear regularly.

If, by the first of May, three hundred subscribers be obtained, the first number of the Democrat shall appear about the last of that month.

CONDITIONS.

The Lebanon Democrat will be published every Saturday morning, on a handsome medium sheet, with a fair type.

The terms of the Democrat is two dollars per annum, half yearly in advance. Advertisements will be published at the usual prices.

Subscriptions received at the Office of the American Patriot.

PROPOSALS.

BY W. BRINDLEY,

For reviving, in the town of Northumberland, the weekly News-paper

CALLED

REPUBLICAN ARGUS.

AS several presses have recently been established at no great distance, the present may be deemed an inauspicious moment for the resuscitation of the Argus. This objection is much reduced if not entirely obviated, in the editor's mind, by considering that, one of these papers has announced its intended departure for Danville, and another disclaiming any attachment to either of the parties, which divide the nation. Under this aspect, if the editor succeeds, in establishing a press to which the republicans of Northumberland, Columbia and Union, can again resort with a warm heart, and a just confidence, he will realise all his expectations.

The revival of the Argus virtually implies an adoption of the same political character, and an attachment to the same political principles, which distinguished its former existence.—Having purchased Mr. Huston's establishment, the editor designs his intentions may be distinctly understood, and will not merely pledge himself by implication. As democratic republicanism has been dear to him from infancy, so his veneration for its principles will never wane, which will be the intellect holds its seat.

The editor has no hesitation in avowing his political character. The Argus never was, nor will he ever render it any thing, or nothing. But he will never wrong any man, or any party; nor will he ever wilfully offend the majesty of truth. The sanctuary of domestic peace shall not be broken; nor shall private reputation be the sport of malignity, or the prey of individual revenge.

The times require the most decisive energy in the government, and the firmest union among the people—to promote these will be a primary object of the editor. But an attempt to consolidate our sovereign republics, or to dissolve the confederation, he holds in utter abhorrence. The state of our country arrests the solicitude of the patriot, while the situation of the world excites the commiseration of the philanthropist. The dissolution of a wide spreading war destroys the lives of the whole human race; from the old world to the new extends its ravages, with aggravations of brutality and barbarity, unknown to civilized nations. Our country has been reluctantly compelled to draw the sword in defence of that independence so gloriously wrested from British tyranny.—United America has unfolded the banners of justice and solemnly determined to defend the laws of nature and nations, and the rights of persecuted humanity. Freemen will never shrink from the defence of a cause so precious, of principles so conducive to the happiness of man. To support this cause, to advocate these principles, shall be the primary duty of the editor.

The local concerns of Northumberland, Columbia, Union, and the adjoining counties shall receive particular attention. The earliest information shall be given respecting the interesting affairs of the state and the union; and, especially, concerning the progress of the war. Legislative proceedings shall be diligently obtained and communicated. The effusions of wit shall not be excluded, and the muses shall be wooed with unabated fervor.

CONDITIONS.

The Argus, will be published every Saturday morning, on paper of a good quality and printed with a good type.—The first number to appear as soon as 400 subscribers are obtained.

The price will be two dollars per annum, exclusive of postage—one half to be paid on delivery of the first number and the remainder in six months.

No subscription will be received for less than one year; nor any person discontinued until all arrearages are paid.
