FROM THE MONTREAL GAZETTE.

CHARACTER OF A NEWSPAPER

A public Journal should the world a muse,
With wit, with humor, and with public news.
This town contains variety of tastes and men;
First, quid-nuncs, quizzers, critics, sophists; then
Comes belles and beaux, coxcombs and macaronies;
Some riding hobby horses, and some their hobby ponies;
Speeches, conventions, paragraphs in papers,
Poor Hobby fee's—and stumbles—or cuts capers!
Quid-nuncs read papers with no other views,
Than to extract the politics and news;
Quizzers read marriages, births and bon-mots;
Critics read papers their satire to expose;
Sophists on subtle altercations dwell,
And fashions occupy the lively belle;
Beaux look at paragraphs for play or ball;
Coxcombs for masquerades and scandal;
A macaroni looks for every kind of stuff,
For crim. con. elopements—or a fulsome puff;
The quid-nunc when her color 'gins to fade,
Fears that she will die a maid,
The quizzer papers, for advertising places
Cosmetics sell, to renovate old
Attention to domestic comfort looks,
From a paper learns of well-bred cooks;
The quid-nunc looks for deaths and resignations,
And all the accidents of foreign stations;
Gamblers look sharply out for lucky winners;
Gluttons delight in reading of great dinners;
While Misses eagerly persue the "title-tattle";
The Politician scans a hard fought battle;
The tradesman deep on money making bent,
Carefully observes every cheap advertisement;
The Farmer looks with joy, or else with pain,
At the depression or the rise of grain;
The gallant sailor, who all fears despises,
Looks with delight at a long list of prizes;
The Lawyer reads—"a libel here appears,"
And strait he sets the parties by the ears;
A well conducted paper public notice catches.
If it be filled with "Crim. Cons." and despatches,
Accidents, puffs, hints and inuendos,
Births, singular occurrences, and oratorios;
Balls, dinners and miscarriages,
Departures, deaths, and marriages,
Speeches, arrivals, and levee-days,
Promotions, super sessions and new plays,
Battles, victories, rumours, and broad hints;
In short, occurrences taken from all sorts of prints.
But of all others, the greatest secret in the trade is,
To take great notice of the most conspicuous ladies.
Their curiosity springs, in every female mind,
To read the papers in the hope to find,
Something of Mrs. A. or Mrs. B.
Or some such something as they should not see.
If Editors should wish or ever hope to thrive,
They must for public taste VARIETY contrive.

FROM THE AURORA.

GENERAL JACKSON.

The distinguished services of General Jackson during the late War, and particularly at New Orleans, have made him an object of universal esteem. All are desirous of being more intimately acquainted with the character of so renowned a Hero. The following brief account of him is extracted from a Pamphlet, recently published in Tennessee, and is probably the most authentic which has yet appeared:
Major-general Andrew Jackson was born of Irish Parents, in Mecklenburg county, North Carolina, and educated in Charlotte, a small town in the same State. He possessed little or no wealth in his youth; but old age and industry have crowned him with riches. He is 50 years old, or a very little upwards; he is lean and spare, 5 feet 11 in's. high, weighs 150 pounds, light complexion, with fair hair, blueish gray eyes, stern countenance, plain and familiar in his manners; a companion to the rich and learned; jocular to the gay; accommodating to his friends, and violent to enemies, hospitable to all; kind to his slaves; charitable to the poor; humane to the unfortunate; remarkably tender and loving to his amiable Spouse; free, liberal, and open-spirited, and naturally qualified for a Warrior and Commander.

His first appearance in public life was at the bar; he has had an honorable seat in both Houses of Congress; acted as a judge in the Courts of law and equity in Tennessee; filled the office of Major-general of West-Tennessee Militia when he marched to the Creek nation; and is now a major-general of the U. S. Army. His residence is 12 miles east of Nashville, Davidson county, in the fork of Stone and Cumberland rivers.

Under the denomination of nervous disorders, are included several diseases of the most dangerous kind, and are so various that a volume would hardly suffice to complete a description of them. It pervades, with its baleful influence, the whole nervous system, writhing the heart with inexpressible anguish, and exciting the morbid suggestions of horror and despair. To this demon have thousands fallen a sacrifice, in the direful transports of its rage. The most common symptoms of its commencement, are, weakness, flatulence, palpitations, watchfulness, drowsiness after eating, timidity, flashes of heat and cold, numbness, cramp, giddiness, pains in the head, back, and loins, hiccup, difficulty of respiration and deglutition, anxiety, dry cough, &c.

The Vegetable Nervous Cordial is also a great Antiscorbutic Medicine, and is of infinite service for purifying the blood, and curing those foul disorders of the skin which commonly appear in the form of Scurvy, Surfeit, Red Blotches, Carbuncles, Ulcers, &c. &c. A dose of the Anti-Bilious Pills, taken occasionally with this medicine, proves of additional service in the last mentioned cases.
