Political.

The Citizen and Politics. Every citizen in this country should study politics. It should be taught in our schools, beginning with the history of the settlement of this country and coming down to the Ameri-· can Revolution, and the system of government adopted by our fathers, and since amended from time to time. Liberty of speech, liberty of conscience, and liberty of the press, stand out in bold relief upon the CHARTER of our liberties. To secure these, as well as personal liberty, personal safety, and the security of private property, is the great design of government; and, in the history of the world, no system has ever been devised by the wisdom of man, or accorded to him by the blessings of Heaven, equal to our system of government. It is deserving of study, and it must be studied to be properly understood. In it are unfolded the rights of the citizen, and the duty and powers of the magistrate. Annually the citizen is called upon to vote for officers constiluting a portion of government; biennially he votes for another set of officers; triennially for yet another set; and every fourth year he votes for the Chief Magistrate of the Union-so that his interest in the government is constantly kept alive, and the flame of his patriotism is always kept burning. This is as it shold be; and this also, shows how necessary it is that every citizen should be acquainted with the theory as well as the practice of our govern-

Its theory is truly admirable. We have thirty-one distinct sovereignties, composing and forming one grand sovereignty, or Union, of all, under one bound, the Constitution of the United States. Every one of the sovereignties or States has its Constitution, differing in form, but agreeing in substance, and protecting and preserving the life, liberty and property of the citizen. In each constitution, provision is made for the election of officers of the General Government, members of Congress, both the house of Representatives and the Senate of the United States; we have the powers delegated by the people to the national government, with some restrictions upon the State Powers, and a general reservation to the people of all powers not expressly, or by necessary implication, granted by them to the Government of the United States-so that, as in the natural, so as in the political world, we have the principles of attraction and repulsion the shores of Africa, or elsewhere. Hence at work. Each State may be said to revolve around the Union as a common center, attrac- country .- Berks County Press.

solar system, and repelled therefrom, lest they approach too near and thereby destroy the equilibrium of the system.

The State Government sometimes encroaches upon the province of the General Government, as when the United States Marshal is brought before the State courts for an alleged breach of official duty, or oppressive exercise of power. The United States courts will protect and have protected their officers. So. also, when any of the States have passed a Bankrupt Law, whilst a national Bankrupt Law was in force. This being prohibited by the Constitution of the United States, in order to prevent the conflict of jurisdiction on questions arising under the laws, it is necessary, for the peace of the community and the admiration of justice, that the act of Congress should be enforced, and the State law declared to be unconstitutional. This has been done in several instances-not only in relation to Bankrupt laws, but to other laws on our Statute Books. Consistently, therefore, with the analogy adverted to, and to preserve the harmony of the system, the national government should repel any such encroachments upon its province, as the State legislature would repel and clear encroachment upon its exclusive

There is one feature in our system of government which has caused a good deal of trouble and which has, time and again, illustrated the remark about attraction and repulsion: it is, that of Slavery, and the Fugitive Slave Law. Some of the States are disposed to carry that law into effect, whilst other States are differently disposed. Here is practical attraction and repulsion. The existence of slavery amongst us is undoubtedly an exception to the general rule-that is, liberty; and when the different States of the Old Thirteen began to liberate their slaves, and thus become free States, the rest of the States, known as slave States, became alarmed, lest the balance of power would be lost to them, and Virginia would cease to be the "Old Dominion," as she was called, from the fact of her furnishing so many Presidents. The multiplication of free Staaes has, therefore, always been a source of political irritation and disturbance in the South, because, in the Senate of the United States, every State, whether large or small, is equal in power and in the number of its representatives, each State having two Sena-

When in 1820, the Territory of Missouri knocked at the doors of Congress, and asked admission into the family of States, as one of their number, the great and agitating question arose as to the term's of her admission: Young men, now marry from this lot of pretty whether she should be admitted as a free State or a slave State We all know how that question was settled, and that it was called the Missouri Compromise, allowing slavery within what was the North-Western territory, up to the line of 36 deg. 30 min. North latitude, and prohibiting it North of that line. This compromise was the result of wise and patriotic counsels; the peace and integrity of the Union were preserved by it and it continued unbroken for a period of thirty-three years! Recently, however, that compromise has been broken, by an act of Congress, passed at the session, familiary known as the Nebraska and Kansas Bill, which allows slavery to be introduced within either of those territories, if the citizens thereof shall decide in favor of it by their votes. It must be observed, by the way, that almost all of the two territories lies North of 36 deg. 30. min., and but for this late act of Congress, slavery would have been forever shut out from their limits!

The advocates of that law concealed their designs under the cover of popular sovereignty, and the doctrine that all governments should be founded on the will of the majorityalleging at the same time, their belief that it was impossible for slavery ever to get there, whilst they were getting ready to remove tither with their slaves and occupy the territories! They forgot the favorite saying of the lamented Calhoun, "masterly inactivity," and the censequence is, that emigration societies have been formed for the purpose of settling both territories with a free population, from home and abroad; they are fast filling up with this kind of a population, to the great annoyance of Douglass and others, slaveholders, whose designs are thus likely to be frustrated.

On this question millions of dollars of the national treasury have been wasted, and a very great excitement was produced and kept up for months in Congress. The course taken by the members of Congress from the North, who voted for the bill, has been generally repudiated by their constituents, whilst that of those who voted against it has been approved.

Such is part of the practical working of our system. The ambition and avarice of the great demagogue and his friends has disturbed the harmony of the community from that time to this; and the passage of that bill has so exasperated the people of the extreme North and West, that they will most probably keep up the agitation in Congress for years, and strive hard to get the fugitive slave law re-1850-another exciting period in our history, when California was admitted as a free State.

It is lamentable that in this country, with a Constitution designed to establish a more peris lamentable, we say, that domestic tranquility is of so little account with ambicious political tricksters; that it is disturbed by them every three or four years by this miserable question of slavery, raised by them to sell their negroes, or to become Presidents of tha United | Atlas. States! We have always believed, and still do believe, that there is no remedy for this evil wish Household Words will received. GRAND LITERARY AND ARTISTIC COMBI-NATION. Arrangements have been made to furnish the Knickerbocker Magazine, the Home Journal, and the New York Musical World and Times, to new subscribers, for five dollars a year. This is cheap literature, with a vengeance. is $3 per annum the Home Journal, $2; and the Musical World and Times, $3; making 88 a year at the usual rates. That three such works can be obtained for five dollars a year, is a fact truly worthy the Caloric age, which is just now being ushered in. Of the Knickerbocker Magazine, edited by Lewis Gaylord Clark, it is unnecessary to speak. For twenty years it has been the genial; humorous, and spicy "monthly" in the world; and the present volume will be better than any which preceded it. The Home Journal, edited by Geo. P. Morris, and N. P. Willis, is well known as the best family- newspaper in America; and the Musical World and Times, edited by Richard Storrs Willis with Lowell Mason, Geo. H. Curtis, Thomas Hastings, Wm. P. Bradbury. Geo. F. Root, and other musical writers contributing and which gives, among other things, over $25 worth of music and a full course of instruction in harmony annually, is the very best musical Journal ever published. These three publications will post a family up in regard to nearly everything worth knowing :- Art, Scivnee, Literature; Music, Painting, Sculpture; Inventions, Discoveries; Wit, Humor, Faney, Sentiment, the Newest Fashions and other attractions for Ladies; Choice New Music for the Sabbath, the Church, and the Fireside; Reviews and Criticism of Musical Works, Performers and Performances; in short, the very pick and cream of Novelty, Incident, History, Biography, Art Literature and Science; including whatever can be given in periodicals to promote Healthy Amusement and Solid Instruction in the family and help to make it Better, Wiser, and Happier, may be now obtained for FIVE DOLLARS. Address DYER & WILLIS, 275 Broadway. Editors publishing the above three times, and sending the papers containing it to Dyer & Willis, will receive the three works named, for one year. Aug. 23, 1854.
