The Difference between Heart and Pluck.

Thomas Thompson, a doer of deeds of blood -a butcher-was recently summoned before the Recorder at New Orleans, at the instance of his better half, who, if he is to be believed, is no better than she should be. Mr. Thompson was a fat man, with a round shiny face, redolent of rare steaks and bottled porter .-Mrs. T. was lean and attenuated-literally a Well, Mrs. Thompson,' said the Recorder, what is the complaint which you have to prefer against your husband?'

Here the butcher rubbed his hand over his glossy forehead and looked inquiringly at the Recorder, and vacantly at his wife, as much as to say 'now for it.'

'Why, your Honor,' said Mrs Thompson, and she throw back her green veil and fanned herself with her pocket handkerchief as she spoke-Why, your Honor, his conduct is such that to a sensitive being of my kind it is the blight and mildew of my domestic happiness-the frost that withers the flower of my felicity.'

Here Mr. Thompson gave expression to a note of admiration by a silent whistle, adding 'Now she is in for it!-now she is coming the treatment do you charge him?' Mrs. Tompson-Why, your Honor, his unkindness is rather of a negative than of an affirmative character. He has no soul-no sentiment. He can appriciate neither the sublime nor the beautiful. I am, myself, a creature of sentiment-of heart I am all heart .-What, sir, but this etherial property of our nature, elevates us above more ignoble beings, and places us in communion with all that is bright and beautiful-with the finest creation of the poets fancy, as well as with nature's sublimest productions-O, sir'-

Recorder-Madam, you must permit me to interrupt you. While I greatly admire your eloquent pathos, I do not see what possible connection it has with any charge you may have to prefer against your husband.

Here the bucher shook his head approvingly, as much as to say, I'll be d-d if I do

The Recorder proceeded: 'Thus far, Madam, you have dealt in generalities-what charge have you to make?'

Mrs. Thompson-I charge him with being cold and callous-with being imbued with no symphathy-with, in short, having no heart.-I could love any thing having a heart; but Thompson has got no heart, and therefore fails to inspire me with that feeling.

Recorder-Mr. Thompson may not be blessed with some of the finer mental attributes, but for this he is not amenable to justice, nor punishable at law; and so far as your allegations yet go, I have seen nothing that he has done, of which I can take cognizance. Are you in the habit, Mr. Thompson, of maltreating you wife?

Mr. Thompson-Lor' bless you, sir, no! My first wife used to say as how I was the kindestest man she ever knowed-my first wife used. She was an affectionate creatur was my first wife; but I'm blamed if I can get the hang of this 'ere 'oman at all. I think there's something wrong in her attic-[and here Mr. Thomson pantomimically pointed the fore-finger of his right hand to his forehead.] I had not been married to her more than a week, when she said to me one morning-Thompson,' says she, 'you haint got no heart.' That's a fact, said I, I sold the only one I had before I left the market. To-morrow, though, I'll kill a sheep, when I'll have another. She then told me as how I was a wulgar creatur', and she has been telling me the same thing every day since. She is all the time a readin' novels and romances, and the like. The night before last she fell asleep readin' one of these here books, all about sentiment, and let the candle burn the muskitter bar. She is all the time a tellin' me I haint got no heart; but I know better; and my first wife used to tell me that I was the best kind of a 'usband-and so I would be, if Mrs. Thompson would act like a sensible butcher's wife, and leave off her sen-timental didoes.

The Recorder said he had listened with part. He thought that if Mrs. Thompson dealt a little more in senses and a little less in sentiment, it would tend to an improvement in matters domestic.

'Yes,' said Mr. Thompson, 'and if she does, though she may continue to think I haint got no heart, she'll find me a fellow of good pluck.'

The case was then dismissed, and Mrs. Thompson left the office, avowing that Thompson had no heart, that the Recorder had no heart, and that this is a neartless world.

LEARNED ELEPHANT .- "That's a werry knowing hanimal of your's," said a cockney gentleman to the keeper of an elephant.

"Very," was the cool rejoinder. "He performs strange tricks and hanties, does he?" inquired the cockney, eying the animal through the glass.

"Surprising," retorted the keeper, "we've learnt him to put money in that box you see away up there. Try him with a dollar."

The cockney handed the elephant a dollar, and sure enough he took it in his trunk, and placed it in a box high out of reach. "Well, that's werry hextraordinary-has-tonishin', truly! Now let's see him take it out and hand it back."

"We never learnt him to do that," returned the keeper with a roguish leer, and then turned to stir up the monkeys and punch the hyenas .- Spirit of the Times.

"A FIRE IN THE REAR!"-The Amesburg Villager tells a good story of an exceedingly anxious individual who was "most crazy" to obtain some account of the Know Nothings. The anxious individual was told by a wag one day, that if he would come out to-that night at ten o'clock and advance fourteen paces into the barn, he would there find a party to initiate him in due form into the mysterious order. The proposition "took," and he accordingly went to the place at the time appointed; he had scarcely entered, however, when he was saluted with a most uncermonious "grip" in the rear, which caused him to vocate the premises in quick time, leaving a part of his "hinder" garments in the teeth of a careful watch-dog, whose owner had given him the euphoneous title of "Know Nothing."

Waiting for Offers.

When ladies are waiting for offers from chaps, They should always be neat and well dress'd; If their heads were adorn'd with percussion caps, They'd go off in a crowd, if hard press'd.

The editor of one of our exchanges has insulted the whole female sex. He says that ladies wear corsets from a feeling of instinct having a natural love of being squeezed.

"My dear," said an affectionate spouse to her husband, 'am I not your only treasure!" "Oh, yes," was the reply, "and I would willingly lay it up in heaven."

the vast mass of available material The aim of the editor will be to produce a publication which shell be valuable in matter, and choice in taste and style; and he flatters himself. from the known talents of his contributors, that he will be able to present as many good original ar-ticles to his readers as any publication of the day He shall not, however, he sitate to publish, from time to time, articles from English authors, and translations from the best German and French writers, provided the pieces have never before appeared in print in this country. Essays on impor-tant Political Subjects will likewise be inserted. and criticisms on the Literature of America and the movements of the Age. The Leview Department, in which a large and liberal spirit of criticism will always be maintained, will be extended. For the defence of American Diterature the editor will always be ready; the maintainance of a cor-rect tone in the Magazine, he will, if possible, be still more watchful.

EACH NUMBER WILL CONTAIN AN ENGRAVING FROM . FINE STEEL PLATE IN ADDITION TO THE CHOICE

DESIGNS AND ENGRAVINGS OF DEVERUX, who will supply illustrations for the text in the body of the book. The aim of the editor will not be so much to increase the number of his engravings, as to secure for those he publishes the utmost finish the artist can give them; for common wood-cuts are so easily multiplied, that the most indifferent publication may outrank in dreary display the choicest periodical.

The Editor does not feel, that with his own readers, he can increase his claims to respect by insisting on any very great superiority of 'Graham' over several similar publications, but thinks he may safely confide in their friendship for the Magazine, and in its past management for its present list, and such increase as naturally grows out of an extended circulation in a country where readers are multiplying so rapidly.

Of the January number the first adition will be 30,000 copies, and the editor trusts his old friends will be so prompt in renewing old clubs, and extending the list among new ones, that the first edition shall be but half os what the year will ultimately establish, as the permanent circulation of Graham Postage. - Subscribers in any part of the United

Aug. 23, 1854. HOUSEHOLD WORDS.—A MONTHLY MAGAZINE AT $2 PER YEAR.—Only those who read the serial so promptly issued every week by Dickens, with thoughtful appreciation, know how to prize it. "Household Words" is a modern journal for the people, devoted to common subjects, uncommonly treated, excellent in style, in genius, in manner, and wonderfully fertile in subject. The pieces are the right length; they exhibit wonderful variety and are attuned to harmonious key and remarkable unity of effect. For the money, there is not the equal of "Household Words" for a family journal. Pleasant stories, useful knowledge, graceful anecdotes, charming essays, alternate in its pages. It is not always convenient to secure a copy of the weekly issue on the arrival of a steamer; in order to enjoy regularly this delightful work, we advise our readers to possess themselves of the handsome monthy reprint of McElrath & Baker, who bring out "Household Words" with commendable punctuali-ty, at New-York.
