respective mills. As an early and constant advocate of the route of our proposed improvement, I cannot but regard with pleasure, any and every movement which has for its object the further expo sition of its merits as a line of communication between Philadelphia and her little sister on the Lakes, and I hope that our meeting in January will prove the dawning hour of its imme

There are and have been few enterprises of a similar magnitude, which combine so many advantages and which have such strong claims upon the attention and support of our entire usiness and travelling community-identical with the State road for 70 miles, and with the Pennsylvania Railroad for 151 miles, our Railroad should undoubtedly become the great lateral feeder-conveying in one unbroken avcaue the immense freight of the Lakes, to one common centre-increasing, to a great extent, the amount of revenue to both, and enriching our beautiful city by the concentration of a trade which is now almost lost to her-al though within the limits of our own ironbound Commonwealth.

Near as we are to our modest little City on the Lakes, is it not wonderful, or somewhat marvellous that as yet, we are only connected with her by a State relationship !

The ties of blood are really strong, but, you Pennsylvania are somewhat stronger and assuredly more lasting.

Here we have aroute which lies wholly within our Commonwealth; a route which in point of directness and local advantages, has no sumeans of developing the vast resources which earich every foot of your soil. but which will our them down in one incessant stream to our eautiful city and give life and anima; on in a fair equivalent for the benefit bestowed by the construction of this road. I have been cambwill hereafter be carried on by James B. Gra- ling about so much that I could scarcely find time to write at all. I have been across the country from Dublin to Sligo, on the Western coast, and from thence I went down to Eniskillen near Lough Reei, (which you may see on a map of Ireland) so that I have seen a tage fare of the peasant, to the luxurious hode of the wealthy, and have found them all, kind and hospitable, and glad to have it in acters as specimens-I mean that class which frequent our public works and throng our it is those who bring the very name of Irishmen to be considered a stigma and disgrace. nearly all of a different species. Another peculiarity of this country is the Fairs, which are held monthly, in every town and village, where the people bring their cattle and stock of all kinds, to dispose off, and which I found a novel sight.

The roads are crowded early in the morning with persons of all descriptions, thronging to well treated. But I have not time, space or ability to portray all the peculiarities that I witnessed, and you must wait until I return, when I will have a better opportunity, if not ability.

We had a very fine passage over here, after we got started. I did not stop in Liverpool, and, after spending a couple of weeks in the West and North of Ireland, I returned to this place, near the centre, where I found a number of relationswho had never expected to see me.
