SUFFERING OF THE POOR .- An instance of the suffering among the poor at the present time was witnessed by some of the passengers in the New York train on Wednesday evening, which excited the compassion of all present. At Newark, a woman with an infant at the breast entered the cars, and soon after was seized with violent cramps, and became much exhausted. On inquiry she could scarcely tell her tale of woe. It seems that, with her youngest child, she had left her home and children in Second street, below Wharton in this city, and gone to Newark, where her husband was endeavoring to find work. For three days she was without food, and meantime she searched for her husband but failed to find him. She was finally prostrated by hunger, on her way home in the cars. The passengers in the car made up a purse of money for her and sent her home in a carriage. The name
