GRAHAM'S MAGAZINE, NEW YORK. In announcing his readiness to receive orders for the New Volume, the editor does not know how any very brilliant talent to hold out in large capitals to dazzle people's eyes.

OF THE VERY BEST READING MATTER, that capital can command from original sources, or taste select from the vast mass of available material.

THE aim of the editor will be to produce a publication which shall be valuable in matter, and choice in taste and style; and he dares trust, that the known talents of his contributors, that he will be able to present as many good original articles as his readers as any publication of the day.

THE Editor does not feel, that with his own readers, he can increase his claims to respect, by insisting on any very great superiority of 'Graham' over several similar publications, but thinks he may safely contend in the face of the great 'Home Journal,' and in its past management for its present list, and such increase as naturally grows out of an extended circulation in a country where readers are multiplied rapidly.

POSTAGE.—Subscribers in any part of the United States may not be aware, that 'Graham,' by mail, at three cents a number, or thirty-six, at a regular postage, payable at the Post-office where it is received.

THE money for clubs always should be sent in advance. Subscriptions may be sent on 'per order,' when the sum is large, a draft should be procured, if possible, from the bank, which may be deducted from the amount.

END OF A TENNESSEE FROLIC.

BY SAM SACK.

Well, we danced and hurraed without anything of particular interest to happen till about three o'clock, when the darndest muss was kicked up you ever did see. Jim Smith set down alongside Bet Holden (the steel-trap) and just give her a hug, bar fashion. She took it very kind till she seed Sam Henry a lookin' on from behind about a dozen of gals—then she fell to kickin' and a hollerin', and a screamin' like all wrath. Sam, he come up and told Jim to let Bet go. Jim told him to go to a far-off country whar they give away brimstone and throw in the fire to burn it. Sam hit him strait atween the eyes, and after a few licks the fightin' started. Oh, hush! It makes my mouth water now to think what a beautiful row we had. One fellow from Gaddy's Cove knocked a hole in the bottom of a fryin' pan, over Dan Tucker's head, and left it bangin' round his neck, the handle flyin' about like a long quiece, and that it hung till Jake Thurman cut it off with a cold chisel next day. That was his share for that night, sure. Another feller got knocked into a meal barrel; he was as mealy as an Irish tater and as hot as a horse-radish; when he busted the hoops and came out he rared a few. Two fellers flit out of the door, down the hill, into the creek, and there ended it in a quiet way, all alone. A perfect mule, from Stock Creek, hit me a wip with a pair o' windin' blades; he made kindlin' wood of them, and I lit on him. We had it head and tails for a very long time, all over the house, but if the truth must be told, and shame my kin, he warped me nice; just to save his time I hollered. The hickin' he gave me made me sorter uneasy and hostile like; it wakened my wof wolf awake. The little fiddler came a scroggin' past, holdin' his fiddle up over his head to keep it in tune, for the fiddlin' was gettin' tolerable brisk. You are the one, thinks I, and I just grabbed the dough-tray and split it plump over his head! He ratted down right then, and I paddled his tetter end with one of the pieces! While I was a mollyfyin' my feelings in that way, his gal slipped up behind me and fetched me a rase with the pot-hooks. Jule Sawyer was there, and just annexed to her right eye, and a mighty nice fight it was. Jule striped and checked her face nice, like a partridge net hung off a white fence. She hollered for her fiddler, but oh, pshaw! he couldn't do her a bit of good; he was too busy rubbin' first his broken head and then his blistered extremities; so when I thought Jule had given her a plenty, I pulled her off, and put her in a good humor by given' her soft sawder. Well, I thought at first if I had a drink I'd be about done; so I started for the creek, and the first thing I saw was more stars with my eyes than when I ever did with them open. I looked around, and it was the little fiddler's big brother! I knowed what it meant, so we locked horns without a word, thar all alone, and I do think we fit an hour. At last some of the fellows hear the jolts at the house, and they cum and dug us out, for we had fit into a hole where a big pine stump had burnt out, and there we was, up to our girths, a peggin' away, face to face, and no dodgin'.

BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT.—When the summer of youth is slowly wasting away into the night-fall of age, and the shadow of the past years grow deeper and deeper, and life wears to its close, it is pleasant to look back, through the vista of time upon the sorrows and felicities of our earlier years. If we have a home to shelter, and hearts to rejoice with us, and friends have gathered together around our fireside, then the rough place of our way-faring will have been won and smoothed away, in the twilight of life, while the sunny spots we have passed through, will grow brighter and more beautiful. Happy, indeed, are they whose intercourse with the world has not changed the tone of their holier feelings, or broken those musical chords of the heart, whose vibrations are so melodious, so tender and touching in the evening of age.

One of 'Pikes' noblemen intends applying for a patent for a machine which he says, when wound up and set in motion, will chase a hog over a ten acre lot, catch, yoke, and ring him, or by a slight change of gearing, it will chop him into sausages, work his bristles into shoe brushes, and manufacture his tail into a cork screw.—Wonderful 'merchisen,' that.
