POPULAR SONG.

DO THEY MISS ME AT HOME.

Do they miss me at home—do they miss me?
 'Twould be an assurance most dear.
 To know that this moment some loved ones
 Were saying, "I wish he were here?"
 To feel that the group at the fireside,
 Were thinking of me as I roam;
 O yes, I would be joy beyond measure,
 To know that they miss me at home.

When twilight approaches—the season,
 That ever is sacred to song—
 Does some one repeat my name over,
 And sigh that I tarry so long?
 And is there no chord in the music,
 That's missed when my voice is away?
 And a chord in each heart that awakes
 Regret at my wearisome stay.

Do they set me a chair at the table?
 When evening's home pleasures are nigh:
 When the candles are lit in the parlor,
 And the stars in the calm azure sky?
 And when the "good nights" are repeated,
 And all lay them down to sleep,
 Do they think of me as I roam,
 And whisper "good night" while they weep?

Do they miss me at home—do they miss me,
 At morning, at noon, and at night?
 And lingers one gloomy shade 'round them,
 That only my presence can light?
 Are joys less invitingly welcome,
 And pleasures less late than before,
 Because one is missed from the circle,
 Because I am with them no more?

ANSWER.

Do they miss thee at home?—yes! we miss thee,
 Since the hour we bade thee adieu;
 And prayers have encircled thy pathway,
 From anxious hearts loving and true;
 That the Saviour would guide and protect thee,
 As far from the loved ones you roam,
 And whisper "good night" as I add, "I miss thee—
 They miss thee—they miss thee at home."

The shadows of evening are falling—
 O, where is thy wanderer now?
 The breeze that's sighing around us
 Perhaps may soon visit his brow—
 O, bear on thy bosom a message:
 "We are watching—oh, why wilt thou roam?"
 The heart has grown cold and dejected,
 For we miss thee—thou art at home."

THE SEER.

By JOHN G. WHITTIER.
 I hear the far-off voyager's horn,
 I hear the sea's low murmur,
 His foot on every mountain pass,
 On every stream his sail.
 He's whistling "round St. Mary's Falls"
 Upon his loaded train,
 He's leaving on the Pictured Rocks
 His fresh tobacco stain.

I hear the matriarch in the mines,
 The axe-stroke in the dell,
 The clamor in the Indian lodge,
 The Jesuit's chapel-bell.
 I see the swarthy trapper come
 From Mississippi's springs,
 And war-chiefs with their painted bows
 And crests of eagle wings.

Behind the squaw's birchen canoe
 The steamer moves and raves,
 And city lots are staked for sale
 Above old Indian graves.
 By forest lake and water fall
 I see the Indian's trail,
 The mighty mingling with the sea,
 The lofty with the low.

I hear the tread of pioneers
 Of nations yet to be,
 The first low wash of waves where soon
 Shall roll a human sea.
 The rudiments of empire here
 Are plastic yet and warm;
 The chaos of a mighty world
 Is sounding into form.

Each rude and jostling fragment soon
 Will fitting place be found,
 The raw material of a State,
 Its muscles and its mind.
 And, westering still, the star which leads
 The new world in its train,
 Has tipped with fire the fancies
 Of many a mountain chain.

"ONLY WAITING."

A very aged man in an almshouse was asked what he was doing now? He replied, "only waiting!"

Only waiting till the shadows
 Are a little longer grown,
 Only waiting till the glimmer
 Of the day's last beam is down;
 Till the light of dawn is faded
 From the heart once full of day;
 Till the stars of heaven are breaking
 Through the twilight soft and grey.

Only waiting till the reapers
 Have the last sheaf gathered home,
 For the summer time is faded,
 And the autumn winds have come,
 Quickly, rapidly, gather ye,
 The last ripe hours of my heart,
 For the bloom of life is withered,
 And I hasten to depart.

Only waiting till the angels
 Open wide the mystic gate,
 At whose feet I long have lingered,
 Weary, poor, and desolate,
 Even now I hear the footsteps,
 And their voices far and near,
 If they call me I am waiting,
 Only waiting to obey.

Only waiting till the shadows
 Are a little longer grown,
 Only waiting till the glimmer
 Of the day's last beam is down,
 Till the light of dawn is faded
 From the heart once full of day;
 Till the stars of heaven are breaking
 Through the twilight soft and grey.

Only waiting till the reapers
 Have the last sheaf gathered home,
 For the summer time is faded,
 And the autumn winds have come,
 Quickly, rapidly, gather ye,
 The last ripe hours of my heart,
 For the bloom of life is withered,
 And I hasten to depart.

Only waiting till the angels
 Open wide the mystic gate,
 At whose feet I long have lingered,
 Weary, poor, and desolate,
 Even now I hear the footsteps,
 And their voices far and near,
 If they call me I am waiting,
 Only waiting to obey.

Only waiting till the shadows
 Are a little longer grown,
 Only waiting till the glimmer
 Of the day's last beam is down,
 Till the light of dawn is faded
 From the heart once full of day;
 Till the stars of heaven are breaking
 Through the twilight soft and grey.

Only waiting till the reapers
 Have the last sheaf gathered home,
 For the summer time is faded,
 And the autumn winds have come,
 Quickly, rapidly, gather ye,
 The last ripe hours of my heart,
 For the bloom of life is withered,
 And I hasten to depart.

Only waiting till the angels
 Open wide the mystic gate,
 At whose feet I long have lingered,
 Weary, poor, and desolate,
 Even now I hear the footsteps,
 And their voices far and near,
 If they call me I am waiting,
 Only waiting to obey.

Wit and Humor.

SALLY MAGUS.

THE WOMAN WHO KNOWS HOW TO MANAGE THE MEN.

"Well, here I be; wake snakes, the day's a breakin'; now I've set my eyes on a good many strange things in my day, but this gettin' married business beats everything I ever did see. It goes ahead of Sam Fling, when he wanted to buy one of my cheeses to make a grind-stone. When I had a husband—Devil's whiskers—if he only said beans to me, I made him jump round like a stump-tail cow in fly time."

"But there's Mrs. Fletcher, she's three parts a natural born fool, and t'other part is as soft as billed cabbage. A woman that don't stand up for her rights is a disgrace to my sect. How any man should ever want to marry such a molasses candy critter as she is, is one of the secrets of human nature. And as to handsome—handsome never stood in her shoes. For she looks as if she'd break in two if she tried to lift a pot of potatoes. I suppose her fingers were made to play the piano."

"Now, it's my notion, when a woman gives a man her hand, it ought to be big enough to hold her heart at the same time. Such a hand as mine is worth giving, for I can stop a bung-hole with my thumb, and I've done it too."

"I went into Fletcher's this morning, and true as I am a virtuous woman, he was busing on her like a dog for lending his receipt book to Miss Brown, who's fond of reading. I sposed he didn't keer for the receipts that was written in the book, but it was the receipts that wasn't there, and ought to be, that stuck into his crop. And Mrs. Fletcher hung down her head, and looked for all the world like a duck in a thunder-storm. I just put my arms again my sides, looked her man right in the eye till he looked as white as a corpse. It's always a way everybody's got when I fixes my eye on 'em. And the way my looks white-washed his brazen face, was better than slacked lime. There says I to Mrs. Fletcher, says I your husband had ought to had me for a wife. When my man was alive, he'd no more think of saying nothing impudent to me, than he'd take the black sow by the tail when she's nursing her pigs; and you must lar to stick up to your man just like a new hair-brush."

"I never found any difficulty in managing these critters, for I always taught 'em what's sarce for the goose is sarce for the gander. There's no two ways with me; I'm all of size, stub-twisted; and made of horse-shoe nails. I'm chock full of grit, and a rough spot for any one to rub their backs against; any gal like me, what can take a bag of meal on her shoulder and tote it to mill, ought to be able to shake any man of my heft. Some thinks I ought to get married, and two or three has tried to spark it with me, but I never listens to none of their flattery. Though there was Blarney Bob came flatterin' me like a tub of new butter. For I've no notion of being trammelled up in their halters of hymens. I likes my liberty, and wants no halters or bridles put upon me."

"Sam Mooney was shinin' up to me too; and then there's Jim Sweetbread, the butcher, but he didn't find me half enough for his market. It isn't everything that sticks its leg thro' broad cloth that's going to carry off a gal of my spirit. My charms ain't to be had for the bare axing. 'Gettin' married is a serious thing, as I told my old man when I was wallopin' him with a leg of mutton, because he took my shoe-brush to clean his teeth with. Wherever there is a nose, there is a mouth not far off, and that proves that nator has given woman her rights as well as man."

DOUBTFUL THEOLOGY.

A friend, whom we call Pat, for short, tells a good one upon himself. When but an idle boy, he was called upon one day in a country school, and the question suddenly propounded to him by the pedagogue—"Patrick, how many gods are there?"

Pat was not a distinguished theologian then, and years have made him no better very fast, in such matters, but he promptly responded—"three sir."

"Take your seat," thundered the master, and in five minutes, you don't answer correctly, I'll welt you."

The probationary period passed, and Pat, taking the floor, hesitatingly stated the number of gods at "five, sir." He received the promised "welting," and a remand to his seat for ten minutes further consideration.

Ten minutes up, and Pat was up too; and satisfied that he hadn't fixed the number sufficiently high before, he shouted "there's ten sir." He saw the ferule descending, and bolting out of the door, cleared a fived railed fence, and broke like a quarter-horse across the fields. Panting with exertion, he met a lad with a book under his arm, and with the look of one who decried the pursuit of knowledge under difficulties.

"Where are you going?" said Pat.
 "To school-yonder," was the reply.
 "You are—are you?" said Pat, quickly,
 "how many gods are there?"
 "Two," answered the boy.

"Well, you'd better go down there. You'll have a good time with your two gods. I just left with ten, and that wasn't enough to save me from the dam'nest lickin' you ever heard of."

A short time ago, two of the most distinguished millionaires, in a flourishing Southern city met in social chat, and discussed their mutual merits. In the course of the confab, the Judge bantered the Colonel, and offered to bet five dollars the latter could not say the Lord's prayer. The Colonel accepted the bet, and putting himself into a solemn attitude, began to repeat, keeping time by the swaying of his body, and pronouncing with emphatic force alternate on each syllable, these lines:

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
 I pray the Lord my soul to keep,
 If I should die—"

"Stop, stop!" cried the Judge, interrupting him, "that will do, I give it up, here's the V, but I did not think you could say it."
