But, oh, the future who can tell? Kind heaven keep Our Willie and his bride

No clouds are frowning o'er their heade, No thorns are 'neath their feet; They think the wide world glad as they-Dear Saviour, grant they ever may; And let no woe betide Our Willie and his bride!

Their years are few, and may their locks Grow white before they part; But never let a snow-flake fail To blight their bloom of heart. We love them much, and to thy care We leave them and confide That angel wings will fold around

Black-handed Blarney.

Our Willie and his bride!

An Irishman, one Barney Brady, was brought up for a combination of the national Hiberian | sun was in eclipse." characteristics-getting drunk and fightingwhich he carried to the "admired extreme." Having drunk his skin full of whiskey he became amiably pugnacious and wanted to whip anybody or anything that would step out sjust loving quarrel with the keeper of a porter house, had kindly knocked down two apple women and a newsboy, in a commendable spircome out and have a "scrimmage," and at the time of his arrest was throwing bricks against the door of Engine No. 97., hoping that some of its Milesian members would sympathize with a gentleman in his pursuit of a quarrel under difficulties, and would come out and take a friendly knock down just out of pure national love and good-fellowship. Policeman 1,001 soon settled him with a few blows of his club, and Barney was brought into Court with his head cut open in several places and his nose knocked sideways as if it had been run over by a meat eart. He was well acquainted with the Judge, having been indebted already to his Honor for a gratious trip up the river, and, although he probably anticipated pretty correctly the result of his examination, he could not resist attempting to "blarney" the Justice, probably from sheer force of habit; however, to the tail of every one of his "sothering" speeches, he tagged on an undertone a qualifying phrase, or direct reversion of that part of his conversation intended for the ear of the Judge, so that while the spoken part of every answer contained one meaning, it would be materially qualified by the whispered after-

Judge-Why, Barney, have you come again? Prisoner-Yes, your Honor; this gentleman wid the star on brought me here to see your Honor's noble countenance once more; an' niver saw a pair of worse lookin' thieves in all my life.

Judge-Have you been drunk again? Prisoner-Slightly elevated, your Honor, not half so drunk as the man that wears your boots gets ivery day of his dirty life. Judge-Don't you think you'd better let whiskey alone, Barney? Prisoner-Perhaps I had; Sir. You ole squint-eyed blackguard, ye know ye git blind drunk and rowl on the floor among the spaniel pups every dinner ye ate.

Judge-The law says I must fine you ten

Prisoner-Yer noble self that knows so much about the law can't find it in yer heart I know, to be heard on an unletthered devil like Barney Brady who knows the law, an' oulder law, an' more of it than could be hammered into that thick old sconce of yours wid a piledriver, ye can't tell Blackstone from a broomstick, and don't know yer little finger from a speakin' trumphet, ye conceited old vagabone. Judge-And you was disorderly, too, and wanted to fight; that is an additional offence. Prisoner-Plase yer Highness, it was only

Dutchman and darkies, an' the likes of thim blackguards, I was disputin' wid, I niver got so drunk yit that I couldn't tell a gintleman like verself-an' wouldn't I like to bate the eves out of your muzzled head, if I only put my fist wonst gintly between yer pig-colored eyes, or let my bit of a stick drop aisy on the top of your empty old pate, ye'd think ye was struck wid chain litenin, or that ye'd suddenly transformed into a galvanized steam ingin an' was goin, ravin' disthracted mad wid a worse fit of delirium triangles than iver ye had yit.

Judge-Can you pay your fine? Prisoner-Tin dollars is it? I've not just the exact change at this minit wit me, yer Honor, but I'll pay ye as sure as the divil's a niggar-if I iver pay wan single cint to that accomplished blackguard, Mr. Justice Beinnan, may I be caught in a muss without a shillelah an' no stones handy, may I be waked widout whiskey or snuff, an' may that s me divil fly away wid what's left of me on a pitchfork for his Sunday morning lunch.

Judge-Can't trust you Barney-have to lock you up.

Prisoner-I suppose it's the best you can do for me, an' I'm thankful to yer Honor; whin I git out call an' see me, av yer plaze-but if I iver see yer ugly mug inside my door first I'll lock up my two spoons an' hide the whiskey an' thin I'll give my personal and immediate attention to batin' ye so blue that yer own mother couldn't swear whether yere her nephew or her niece.

"Some Shaking." Tom is a queer genius, and lets off some tall ones occasionally. He visited us the other day in our sanctum, with a

"How do you do, old fellow ?" "Hallon, Tom," said we, "where have you been so long ?"

"Why, sir, I've been down on the Severn river, in Anne Arundle, county, taking Shanghai notes on the Chills and Fever." "Ah, indeed,e' said we, "are they very bad down there?" ! died ob file to

"Rather bad," said Tom, drily. "There is one place where they have been attempting to build a brick house for eight weeks,-well, the other day, as the hands were putting on the bricks preparatory to finishing it, they were all taken with a chill, and shook the whole building completely down, and kept on shaking till the bricks were powdered into brick dust of the finest quality! Just at that juncture, the chill came on with renewed force, and they commenced shaking up the brick dust with such gusto, that the sun was entirely obscured for two hours, and the people in the neighborhood thought that the

"Gas!" said we. "Not at all," said Tom.

Why, I was sixteen miles further down the river the other day, and saw four men carrying a big pine log, from on board a schooner for the fun of the tracas." He had picked a to the shore, when just as they reached the shore the chill came on, and they shook the log which was thirty feet long, all up in pieces of the proper length for firewood, and then it of pleasantness had kicked in a basement taking a reshake of it, split and piled up, at window in the hope of inducing the owner to the same time shaking all the knots out of it." "Can't believe any thing like that, Tom,"

"It's a fact," said Tom, and he resumed-"There's a farmer down there, who, in apple-picking season, hauls his niggers out into the orchard, and sets one up against each tree. In a short time the chill comes on. and every apple in the orchard is shaken off the trees on to the ground."

"Incredible!" said we holding our sides with both hands.

"Fact," said Tom, "they keep a man alongside of each negro to take him away as soon as the fruit is off, for fear he will shake the tree down !"

"Mr. S, a friend of mine, and a house carpenter, was engaged a few days ago in covering the roof of a house with shingles. Just as he was finishing, the chill came on, and he shook every shingle off the roof. Some of them are supposed to be flying about yet!"

"Another gentleman near the same place was taken with a chill the other day at dinner, and shook his knife and fork down his throat; besides breaking all the crockery ware on the table. His little son who was sitting at the table at the same time, was taken with a chill and shook all the buttons off his inexpressibles, and then shook himself clear out of them!"

We then prevailed on Tom to desist, who did so, with the understanding that he would give us the balance at some other time.

Persons who think of emigrating to Anne Arundle county, will please take notice.

An Arkansas Story.

We knew a man living near Black Fishing Creek Ferry, Arkansas, who is so hard of bearing that he invariably misunderstands every thing that is said to him. It so happened that this same man was the owner of a skiff that was lying in the river, which needed some repairs. At this point a young gentleman who had been paying his addresses to his daughter, came up to him as he stood on the bank of the river, when the following conversation took place.

"Mr. D. can I have your daughter ?" said the young man.

"Yos," was the reply, thinking he had been asked for his skiff, "but she must be corked. -she lenks."

"It's your daughter I would like to have," said the young gent.

"Yes if she is taken out and overhauled. and corked, she will do very well-she leaks in the bottom. The boys spoiled her," still continued D.

Here the young man deferred any further remarks and went away with the hope that at a more convenient season the old gentleman would be better able to understand.

Experience Teaching "Fules."

The following conversation between two pitmen, was overheard, says the Gateshead Observer, not long ago, by a gentleman in the south of this country :-

"Aw say, Georgie, man, aw hear thou's been makin' a fule o' thesel."

"Ay, man, auve gotten a wife."

aWy, dis thou knaw auve dune the syam thing mesel? Wat kind o' body has thou got-

"A parfect deval, man-a parfect deval." "Smash me, man! A wish mine was nea worse than that."

"Warse than that!" responded Georgie; show can she be warse than that? Isn't Beelzebug the warst critur a man can hav for an
