The frequent blast Groans thro' the night, and means in lashing seas. Bends the dead limbs, and leaves the rifled trees Ekeletons of the past.

The winds that moan, The leaf that withers and the limbs that fall, The flight of birds, but dying years recall, With many a groan.

These, life do typify; [leaves Misfortune is the blast, and treasured joys the And friends, the birds that fiv the wintry caves, When comes adversity.

"By and By."

There's music enough in these three words for the burden of a song. There's hope wrapped up in them, an articulate beat of the human heart.

By and by!

We heard it as long ago as we can remember, when we made brief but perilous journeys from chair to table, and from table to chair again.

We heard it the other day, when two parted that had been "loving in their lives," one to California, and the other to her lonely home.

Everybody says it-some time or other .-The little boy whispers it when he dreams of exchanging the little stubbed boots for those like a man.

The man murmurs it, when in life's middle watch, he sees his plans half finished, and his hopes yet in the bud, waving in the cold, late spring.

The old man says it-when he thinks of putting off the mortal for the immortal, to-day for to-morrow.

The weary watch for the morning, and while away the dark with "by and by."

Sometimes it sounds like a song; sometimes there is a sigh or a sob in it. What wouldn't the world give to find it in almanacs-set down somewhere, no matter if in the dead of December-to know that it would surely come! But fairy like as it is, fitting like a starbeam over the dewy shadows of years, nobody can spare it, and we look upon the many times these words have beguiled us, the memory of the silver "by and by, as like the subrise of Ossian, pleasant but mournful to the soul."

THE RAFTSMAN'S JOURNAL.

A New Way to Detect a Thief. The father of the great Daniel Webster, was a humorons and focose personage, and innumerable are the anecdotes related of him. As he was journeying in Massachusetts; not far from his native town, he stopped rather late one night at an inn in the village of -. In the bar-room were about twenty different persons, who, as he entered, called out for him to discover a thief. One of the company, it appeared, had a few minutes before, had a watch taken from his pocket, and he knew the offender must be in the room with them.

"Come, Mr. Almanac maker, you know the signs of the times, the hidden things of the season, tell us who is the thief." "Fasten all the doors of the room and let no one leave it; and here landlord go and bring your wife's great brass kettle."

"Whe-ew! want to know! my stars! my wife's whe-ew !" quoth Boniface.

"Why, you couldn't be more struck if I told you to go to pot!"

Boniface did as commanded; the great brass kettle was placed in the middle of the floor, its bottom up-as black, sooty and smokey as chimney back. The landlord got into his bar and looked on with eyes as big as saucers.

"You don't want any hot water nor nothin" to take off the bristles on a critter, do you, Square ?" said the landlord, the preparation looking a little too much like hog killing .--"The old woman's gone to bed and the well is dry."

"Now go to the barn and bring the biggest cokeral you've got."

"Whew! you won't bile him, will you? he's tough one. I can swear, Square, he didn't steal the watch. The old rooster knows when it is time to crow without looking at a watch." "Go along, or I won't detect the thief."

Boniface went to the barn and soon returned with a tremendous fat rooster, cackling all the way like mad.

"Now put him under the kettle and blow the light out."

The old rooster was thrust under the inverted kettle and the lamp blown out.

"Now gentlemen, I don't 'spose the thief is in the company; but if he is, the old rooster will crow when the offender touches the bottom of the kettle with his hands. Walk round in a circle, and the cock will make known the watch stealer, The innocent need not be afraid, you know."

The company then, to humor him, and carry out the joke, walked around the kettle in the dark for three or four minutes.

"All done, gentlemen ?"

The N. Y. Times says: They have got a new "baby elephant" up town, the product, we believe, of one of the elephants belonging to Barnum's travelling menagerie. Being too unwell to go upon her usual summer tour, she was left at home, we believe, to recuperate for a season. The result is this addition to the elephantine circle. Both Buffon and Goldsmith tell us, as a scientific fact, that elephants never gestae in captivity. However prolific in their natural state, they never give birth in the domestic condition, those authorities assure ns, to other captives -- and such used to be the case. But a lew years ago, one of the female elephants in the Zoological Garden at Regents Park, London, set the example. An elephant in the Jardin Plantes, at Paris, followed in 12 months after. A year after an elephant in this city gave us an imitation, and now, as if our country must keep ahead of all competi- kept aloof from the kettle, lest when he touchtion, behold we have another.

These baby elephants are very interesting objects. They are perfectly formed throughout, and differ from their parents only in sizebut the difference is so amazing that it becomes rediculous; and when you see the baby the comparison. And then the comparison .- juil. And then the bulky mother's care of her baby is so human like and affectionate. Give the baby an apple for instance-the mother elephant takes it in her trunk, examines it closely, and then returns it to her infant to eat, having apparently satisfied herself of its innocuousness. And so with everything else. The watchful care, the jealous fondness, the assiduous and untiring attention of the parent-monster, is iminently worthy of imitation by many a being who' makes profession of a much greater chare of intelligence.

Beaut i'ul Old Ag .

In Mrs. Sigourney's new book, "Past Meridian," the following charming picture of virtuous old age occurs. God grant that such pictures may not be few and far between :

"The venerable old man vigorous, his temples slightly silvered, when more than fourscore years had visited them, how freely flowed forth the melody of I is leading voice amid the sacred strains of public worship! His favorite tunes of "Mear" and "Old Hundred." wedded to these simply sublime words: "While shepherds watched their flocks by night." and-

"Praise God, from whom all blessings flow," seem even now to fall sweetly, as they did upon my childish ear. These, and similar ancient harmonics, mingled with the devout prayers that morning and evening hallowed his home and its comforts; she, the loved partner of his days, being often sole auditor .-Thus, in one censor rose the praise which every day seemed to deepen. God's goodness palled not on their spirits because it had been long continued. They rejoiced that it was 'new every morning, and fresh every evening." "

IT Let the miser have his gold, and the man of honor his emblems of renown, but let my portion be the boon of friendship, secured within some faithful heart, in which peace, contentment, and every virtue, reign perpetually supreme.

"All done," was the cry, "where's your crowing ? We heard no cockadoodeldo." "Bring us a light."

A light was brought as ordered. "Now hold up your hands, good folks."-

They were of course black, from coming in contact with the soot of the kettle. "All up."

"All up was the response.

"All----- don't know. Here's one fellow who hasn't held up his hands."

"Ah, ah! my old boy, let's take a peep at your paws."

They were examined, and they were not black like those of the rest of the company. "You'll find your watch about him-search." And so it proved. The fellow not being aware, any more than the rest, of the trap that was set for the discovery of the thief, had ed it the crowing of the rooster should proclaim him as the thief. As the hands of all the others were blackened, the whiteness of his own showed of course that he had not dared to touch the old brass kettle, and that he was the offender. He jumped out of the walking to and fro under its mother, you can- frying pan into the fire, and was lodged in as not resist the impulse to laugh at the oddity of comfortable a place as either-to wit-the
