

NOTHING IS LOST

Nothing is lost; the drop of dew Which trembles on the leaf or flower Is but exhaled to fall anew...

Patent Alarm Beds.

Those who have visited the Fair at the Crystal Palace, must have noticed the patent alarm bed—a Down East invention.

We have a good story to tell in connection with one of those beds (says the Uncle Sam, a 'Boating' paper).

We will not attempt to draw a picture of what ensued, but suffice it to say that while the alarm bed was in use...

Ethan Allen.

A good story is told of that rare old reprobate, Col. Ethan Allen, whose services to his country in the "times that tried men's souls," were only equalled by his during assertions of the right of private opinions on theological matters.

Quoth the minister—'Colonel, how does it happen that a man of your extensive influence and information has never seen it to be his duty to join our society?'

'Well, brother,' replied Allen, 'I have often thought as you do about the business, and one day I had almost made my mind up to fall into the snare; but that night I had a dream which caused me to give it up.'

A CHAPTER ON RATS.—We noticed the systematic attack made by rats in New Haven, on some children, each singling out its victim, and jumping with a simultaneous squeal upon the little girls playing in the yard.

The rat is one of the most interesting animals on the globe. In Europe he marks his horrid era—different hordes of invaders brot their peculiar rat in their train.

The brown rat, otherwise known as the Norman rat, has established itself all over the world, by the commerce of the civilized times—it has had possession of France for the last six or seven centuries; but within the last it has found its master in the Muscovite and Tartar rat, called in Paris the Moustoutraon.

The establishment of the Muscovite rat in France commenced with the extirpation of the brown or Norman rat—that has almost disappeared, and is only in the cabinets of the curious collectors.

The cat turns tail upon this rat, in its most ferocious state. A good rat terrier is the best destroyer, but fortunately ratiophages are not another, fights duels, indulges in broils and intense frolics, and grand destructive battles.

The rat is the emblem of misery, murder and rapine—a canifid and a robber—devoted to the principle of war and agitation.—Will it ever disappear?

'Who's Your Husband?'—We have recently learned the particulars of a most singular circumstance.

Some time since a citizen of Boston emigrated to California, leaving his wife behind him. At the expiration of one year he left San Francisco for the mines, and owing to the careless postal arrangements, his wife received no letter from him for the following year.

This seemed to confirm information received by her from what she considered an authentic source, that her husband was dead, and accordingly the wife, against whom there never had been the shadow of a reproach, yielded to the entreaties of, and married another suitor.

The second lived only a few months after the nuptials, and the widow, for a second time (as she thought herself) was slightly surprised a day or two ago by the appearance of her first husband.

Matters have of course been satisfactorily explained, and the husband and wife are now living happily together. The affair has, however, excited much comment and scandal among their immediate acquaintance, and an interested party is about, so says rumor, to enter a complaint of bigamy against the lady.

'Do you know,' said Dr. Bushwacker, as he stretched out his full glass to be touched, 'how this custom originated; this ringing of wire bells or kissing of beakers, sir?'

'Well, brother,' replied Allen, 'I have often thought as you do about the business, and one day I had almost made my mind up to fall into the snare; but that night I had a dream which caused me to give it up.'

THE NEW-YORK TRIBUNE, 1855-6.

The Tribune is now in the midst of its fifteenth year, Vol. XV. of its weekly issue commenced on the 1st of September last. This anniversary has not been more joyfully commemorated with its character of claims to consideration.
