monstrous wickedness, even though you suffer like your brother for so doing.

Do so now brother, for this is not an idle fancy. Were the Missouri Kansas laws to be enforced, then such must be our fate; and those who framed them swear that they shall be enforced; and the President says they shall be enforced, and that the United States milltary and the Missouri militia will be employed to do it. But the President and the Missourians are the powers that be, as yet, although they are endcavoring to thrust themselves upon us. If a man were to come into your house with a pair of shackles and attempt to put them on you, would you sit still and let him do so? You would be very apt to ask him what he meant. Then if he should pull out a revolver and tell you that he would let you know what he meant; what would you do ?-What should you do? tha't the question .-Now such is our case, we don't like the idea of being hung and imprisoned by hundreds .-We don't like the thought of being hunted down like wild beasts; and we would rather die on the battle-field, than on the scaffold .-But the great question with me has been the moral character of the thing; for I would sooner die any way in obedience, than to live by disobedience. You cannot know with what intense earnestness I have sought a solution for this question; for on the one hand it seems wrong to fight; and on the other it seems equally wrong not to protect the helpless women and children; and above all the banner of Freedom, which, even in Kansas, is still waving above us. I have sometimes thought of leaving the Territory, but I cannot bear the thought of thus forsaking the cause. More ought to come, instead of any going away .-But of what use is it for me to stay here unless I help? So I have pretty much made up my mind, that, if occasion requires, I shall help to the uthost of my ability. Pray for me brother; and for our enemies too, for they need our prayers, that God will enlighten their minds and turn them from this horrible guilt. And, o, stir up the church, to take an open.

manly, christian stand against the sorceress which threatens to destroy her vitality. Then shall we be like Sardis, and shall need to leave our native land to preserve our christianity. You are every way qualified for this great work. Write and preach, rebuke, entreat and plead, until the sleeping mass wakes up. We should not spend too much time straining out gnats, when a mighty serpent is endeavoring to swallow us, gnats and all. We look with horror at the intolerance of other lands-why can't we see our own? We deplore the dangers which beset our brothers among the heathen-why can't we perceive the horrible persecution which threatens us here? Is slavery a sacred thing which must not be handled? lishment in the County. Or is it a sin so great that Christians fear to touch it? If it were holy, then must its fruits be holy. By their fruits shall ye know them. But its fruits are all diabolical. There is no redeeming quality in them. Then it must be sin; and why don't christians more generally encounter it? Why don't they thrust the sword of Truth between the ribs of the murderess? Let every christian warrior do this, and she dies; and twenty-five millions in the present, and countless myriads in the future will rise up to thank God for the stroke. Neglect to do so, and it must pass upon ourselves -the white race. It is not because men are black that they are enslaved; but because others have power to do it. They will yet, if prospered in their iniquity, do the same by their own kindred. "It is the principle of the thing"-the same spirit of usurpation under whose influence men forsook the Deity who created him, and deified self; making his own will the ruler of his actions, and the criterion of right, and endeavoring to bring all around him into subjection to that will. And groveling down to the very ground, and struggling and striving to preserve this illusion of selfsovereignty, he hesitates not to employ any means to accomplish his ends, however inconsistent and wicked they may be; for he cannot rise above self; but bowing down at this shrine of his idolatry, and trampling upon the rights of man on the one hand, and upon the rights of woman on the other-enslaving some and pouring out the blood and happiness of others, according to his desire, he rushes madly onward to the sorrow of his race, and to his own destruction. The same principle assumes a variety of forms. It enslaves the African, because he is black; and it tramples upon the rights of woman, because she is weak. It clothes its oppressors in the garb of humanity, and it sanctifies them with Christian love and zeal. It would grind the earth to powder to serve its purpose, and, were it possible, would destroy the throne of the Deity himself. O! how shall we break the wail of this blinding, enslaving illusion, and look up, in the enfranchisement of our souls, to the fair blue heavens and to God? To see in the sun which gives us light and warmth, the herald of an eternal Sun that will never set; to read on the stars which nightly shine above us, the promise of our own bright destiny, as planets in the everlasting system of God; to learn from the flowers which gladden our sad hearts, and from the waving grass, and from the summer showers, monitions of gentleness and love; to behold in the face of our brother, the image of the Deity whom we adore, and removing every obstacle from his path, press upward by his side toward the haven of God's promise and of our hopes. O, this would be lovebright, holy, evangelical love-the only thing which can ever christianize the world.

Perhaps you may think that I have crowded | Burns, a good deal of radicalism into a short space. I don't mean to be unreasonable though, but ultraism can hardly get ahead of the occasion at present. A man from Kansas City, (Mo.,) has just called in, and tells me that Gov. Shannon is at Independence, clothed with unlimited powers, to come out here with the Missonrians and arrest the principal Free State men. Whether they will give themselves up, or whether there will be fighting, I cannot say. The winter broke up about the middle of Feb. We have had frosty nights, and some cold days since, but not very severe. I wish God only knows whether we shall ever meet April 9, 1856.

Dec. 27, '54. MAPORTANT TO HOUSEKEEPERS AND I FRUIT GROWERS .--- ARTHUR'S PATent Air-Tight Self-Sealing Cans and Jars, for Preserving Fresh Fruits, &c.—This invention for which a patent has been obtained, commends itelf to the attention of Housekeepers and others, on account of its great simplicity, and the effectual manner in which it accomplished a very desirable and useful object A. I desire to sell my property in Tyrone City, Blair Co. Pa., commonly known as the Tyrone net around the mouth, nerr the top, into which the cover fits loosely. This channel is filled with a very adhesive coment, prepared for the purpose and allowed to harden. In order to seal the vessel hermetically, it is only necessary to heat the cover slightly, and press it into place. It may be pened with as much ease as it is closed, by slightwarming the top. The ordinary tin cans, used for the same purpose for which this is intended, cannot be closed, as is well known without the aid f a tinner; are difficult to open, and are generally o much injured in opening as to be useless for uture service.

By this simple contrivance, the process of hernetical sealing is placed conveniently within the reach of every individual; and fruit, vegetables and butter (if properly prepared) may be kept. with their natural flavor unimpaired, for an in lefinite length of time. For sale by MERRELL & CARTER.
