

THE HAUNTED MOOSE.

A friend of ours, says the Albany Tribune, Bob H., during the late cold term, thought he would go into Hamilton and have a moose hunt. He left the city in company with six other gentlemen, on Wednesday of last week.

After a ride of about twenty-four hours, they reached the borders of the great wilderness. Having put up their horses and sleigh at the last tavern, they started out for a week's sport in the woods, the second day in the wilderness, our friend and party started a moose of first class proportions. They sighted him about noon, and kept on his track till about 3 o'clock, P. M., when the party informed Bob that they were completely tired out, and they intended to take the back track for the shanty and have dinner.

Our friend said: "Very well, go back if you please. As for me, I'll have that moose or perish in the attempt." The party went back and Bob went ahead. He kept up the chase till nearly dark, when he got sufficiently near the critter to give him a coup de grace. He was a glorious fellow. Like Frank Granger, "six feet high and well proportioned." Bob was rejoiced at his success. But his pleasure had one drawback, "what could he do with him?" Another source of uneasiness was the excessive cold, and the distance from the shanty, some eight miles. While philosophizing upon his toils, night came on, and as there was no such thing as getting up a fire, he was at his wit's end to keep from freezing. At last he hit upon an expedient.

He cut open the moose, took out its entrails, and crawled in and lay down. The animal heat kept him as warm as "pepper sass," till about midnight, when he fell asleep. He awoke about sunrise, and thought he would crawl out and start back to his friends. There was one pull back to this arrangement. After the heat had left the moose, he had frozen as stiff as a post, an operation that subjected Bob to as rigid a confinement as if he had been locked up in a Bastille. Bob endeavored to cut himself out with a knife. But it was no go. He might as well have undertaken to whittle granite. Bob spent a most melancholy day, and finally worried nature into a sound sleep.

While thus unconscious, a company of hunters came along, discovered the moose, fastened a rope to his legs, and set about dragging him out of the woods. This movement awakened Bob, who thought he was getting haunted, and, therefore, commenced hallooing for help. Such a noise coming from a dead moose, excited the superstition of the hunters to such a degree that they abandoned their prize and fled as if the devil was after them. After running about three miles they met Bob's friends, who had been out all day trying to discover his whereabouts. The hunters told the story of the haunted moose and the strange noise which came from his abdomen. Bob's friends smiled.

They requested the hunters to return. In a half hour the "haunted moose" was reached. The friends halloed "Bob!" Bob halloed "here!" The friends said: "we are going to cut, look out for the axe." Bob said: "let drive, better have a damaged head than legs made of icicles." The adventure has made an impression on Robert. He says the next time he sleeps inside of a moose, he will take good care that it has "leather hinges on its back."

A MODERN WM. TELL. The following piece of daring sport is related by the Albany Transcript: The feat in shooting performed by Tell in shooting an apple off the head of his son, has been told over and over again, and is as familiar as household words, was a wonderful piece of execution, close calculation and great daring. Something similar was attempted and successfully performed in the village of Pittstown, Rensselaer county, about a week since. The circumstance was related to us as follows: There had been a turkey shooting, at which several "crack shots" had assisted after the shooting was over, the crowd adjourned to the tavern; numerous drinks were called for and put out of sight, and the whole party some what elated, commenced talking about Tell when one of the party, by the name of Horace W. Wadsworth, remarked that he was as good a shot as ever Tell was, and said he "found me a man, and I'll prove it," whereupon Alonzo Grogan stepped forward and said, "I'm the man for you to practice upon." "Very well!" said W., "get an apple, and I'll try it." Search was made for an apple, but not finding one readily, a potato was substituted, and the crowd adjourned from the bar room to the yard.

The distance was paced. Grogan took his place, with his cap off and potato on his head, when Wadsworth deliberately raised his rifle, drew a fine shot on the potato, and discharged his piece arm's length. No one expected that he would do it, and for a moment consternation was depicted on the countenances of all the bystanders, until Grogan putting his hand on his head, said in an agonizing tone, "Am I dead?" "Is there any blood?" "It was found that Grogan was not dead, but that the potato had been cut in twain, and that no blood had been drawn, though a ridge about the size of a person's finger had been raised on the top of his head by the force of the ball.

Grogan, who did not think that Wadsworth would fire, was seriously alarmed for a few minutes afterwards, as he believed that his skull was split. He says that if any smart shots want to practice shooting potatoes off any person's head, they must find some one beside him to be the target. Why is the life of an editor like the Book of Revelations? Because it is full of types and shadows, and a mighty voice, like the sound of many waters, is ever saying to him, write.

It has been discovered that the respectable and world-renowned monarch, Old King Cole, was a descendant of Antracite, and that his jolly old soul was nothing but shoe leather.

IMPORTANT TO HOUSEKEEPERS AND FRUIT GROWERS.—ARTHUR'S PATENT AIR-TIGHT SELF-SEALING CANS AND JARS, for Preserving Fresh Fruits, &c.—This invention for which a patent has been obtained, commends itself to the attention of Housekeepers and others, on account of its great simplicity, and the effectual manner in which it accomplished a very desirable and useful object. The cans and jars are constructed with a channel around the mouth, near the top, into which the cover fits loosely. This channel is filled with a very adhesive cement, prepared for the purpose and allowed to harden. In order to seal the vessel hermetically, it is only necessary to heat the cover slightly, and press it into place. It may be opened with as much ease as if it closed, by slightly warming the top. The ordinary tin cans, used for the same purpose, which this is intended, cannot be closed, as is well known without the aid of a tinner; are difficult to open, and are generally so much injured in opening as to be useless for future service. By this simple contrivance, the process of hermetic sealing is placed conveniently within the reach of every individual; and fruit, vegetables and butter (if properly prepared) may be kept with their natural flavor unimpaired, for an indefinite length of time. For sale by MERRELL & CARTER, Clearfield, Sept. 19, 1855 ft.
