Still there was no harm in pushing Mr. Fillmore in the South if he was willing to place himself in the breach, but it was madness to attempt to stem the resistless torrent of the FreeSoil sentiment of the North, where almost with one accord the people had for two years determined to averige the cause of Free Labor and Free Speech against the aggressions and assaults of Southrons. It was worse than madness to push Fillmore and Fremont to each other's disadvantage in the North. Each should have been pushed to the other's advantage, and both with a single eye to the defeat of Buchanan. But while Fremont was not urged to the injury of Fillmore-the Fillmore presses were found assuming attitudes of the most fatal hostility to Fremont, and through him to the interests of the opposition. The charge of Catholicity ingloriously urged against him, betrayed the utmost want of political judgment in its utterers, and caused all who desire to save the country from a continuation of the misrule of the last four years, to tremble for the result, and not without cause, since that alone lost to the State Ticket in Pennsylvania in October, many thousands of votes, or at least enough to have carried the ticket through. The Democrats saw and profited by, and fostered this feeling, and by it defeated in the very States in which the election was to be decided, a combination which would have been fatal to them. And all sincere enemies of Calhounism, and Pierce-Douglas-Democracy, as laid down in the Cincinnati platform, are lett to regret that American intelligence and self-confidence cannot rise superior to the low ribaldry of rowdy demagogues, and the vulgar vituperation of the Irish crew, which constitutes the strength of the party of the "Ins." In all the Northern States except New Jersey and Pennsylvania, (or if the exceptions were more numerous it matters not, since in them the die was cast,) the opposition finding Fillmore unavailable except for a diversion in the South, or as a forlorn hope on the possible chance of its being necessary to throw the election into Congress, adopted the fusion plan of action, which had been contemplated from the beginning. In these States it was peremptorily declined by the Fillmore leaders, in obedience to sinister influence controlling them, and the sensitiveness of a tew thousands of the American rank and file to the epithets of "Woolly Heads," &c., lavished upon them by Jeering crowds of Celts and noisy hurrah-lal manner in which it accomplished a very desi-rable and useful object impunity say they would prefer Fremont to to his fatal injury, it would have been no more than "a Roland for an Oliver" had Fillmore men in the North claimed the right to prefer Fremont to Buchanan.

By the miserable infatuation, if nonest, by the atrocious villainy, if unduly influenced, of the Fillmore leaders in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, the opposition was defeated, notwithstanding the acknowledged advantages it possessed of nationality of views, aims and tendencies; and Disunion Secessionists can shake hands with Abolition Fanatics in mutual gratulation at the triumph of sectional agitation over the cause of domestic peace, and Soule, at his 50,000 dollar hacienda in Nicaragua, can celebrate with Walker the triumph of filibusterism and land-piracy over the plighted honor of the national government, and the hitherto untarnished name of the American people.

Against the recurrence of similar eventuali-

ties there is but one protection-and that is to be found in an immediate organization of all opposed to the dominant party in one united body, a careful and judicious selection of leaders, with the adequate diffusion of rehable information, and its application to the issues of the hour, through a well-directed press, upon which the people can rely, both as to facts and the views upon which their action should be based. A beginning cannot be made too soon. The organization which elected Jackson in 1828 was entered upon in 1824. It requires "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether" to ensure success. The Democracy can dictate, we must enlighten. They can command, we must convince and persuade .-They can move their forces by the tap of the drum, and we must arouse our ranks by the calls of patriotism and the dictates of ascertained duty. With them "the orders of the day" are obeyed, blindly and implicitly; with us intelligence and jealous vigilance has to be moved by the light of reason, and satisfied by unanswerable argument. To arms! then, to arms! Assemble! organize in wards, townships, counties, States! Take time by the forelock, and be ready, all told off, to strike | 2d; $150 for the 3d; $125 for the 4th; $100 for for victory in 1859.
