We hope the voters of the 24th Congressional District will ponder well the subject of electting a man to represent them in the legislative branch of the federal government. It happens | is called the Douglas platform, and found that, too often that individuals are sent to Congress who know little of, and care less for the resources and wants of our Commonwealththey being the representatives of mere party | Here my mind became confused with the conspirit and party schemes, regardless of the interests of their constituents and the people at large. MILTON N. TAYLOR, of Baltimore, has written a letter, under date of August 8th, declining to serve as one of the Democratic State Electors for Maryland, and in speaking of the Convention which nominated Mr. Breckinridge, he pointedly remarks ;-

Democracy for Congress in this district, made a speech in Warren on the 20th ult. The Ledspeech of Mr. Kerr, says :--

"He reviewed the position of parties at the present day with great force, and ably argued the correctness of the principle of Popular Sovereignly, as expounded by Stephen A. Douglas. He announced that he was determined to stick to that doctrine, as being the only safe way of disposing of the Territorial question." It is a fair logical deduction that, if Mr. Kerr is "determined to stick" to Popular Sovereignty, he repudiates the Breckinridge dogma that Slavery, under the Constitution, exists in the Territories, and that it is the duty field like Mr. Kerr's position? Will he "stick will be news to most people.

S. B. Row :- In looking over the Clearfield or four platforms which are claimed as Democratic. At first the thought arose : perhaps, if he does not straddle two platforms, he strad-dles four; then, again, if he does not straddle four, he may perhaps "rest" on one, but which one? I then again referred to the platforms, and taking up the one made at Cincinnati, in it I found a plank with these words :-- "That the " seas and progressive free trade!" Perhaps, I thought, as Gen. Foster is a Pennsylvanian, and this platform was adopted four years ago, the Democratic doctrine on that point may have been changed as well as on others, and being against Pennsylvania interests, he would | publicanism. Is he satisfied?" not "rest" on that. So I turned to what is called the platform of the Reading Convention, which closed on the 2d day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty, and at which Convention Gen. Foster was nominated for Governor; but, lo! and behold! in the first resolution I found a reaffirmation of the Cincinnati platform. Now, ing" on a free trade platform; but on further examination I found a plank in the same platform, which says, "That the convictions of the Democratic party of Pennsylvania remain unshaken in the wisdom and justice of adequate protection of iron, coal, and the other great staples of the country." Now, says I to myself, this begins to look like Pennsylvania doctrine; but may be this is "Polk, Dallas, and the Tariff of '42," come again. It sounds very much like it, and the more I think over it the more it appears to me like a cheat of the same sort. I then referred to another platform, called the Breckinridge platform; here I found "that Congress has no power to abolish slavery in the Territories; 2d, that the Territorial Legislature has no power to abolish slavery in any Territory." I then turned to what according to its teaching, it is "Democratic doctrine" to abide by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States over the institution of Slavery within the Territories. flicting doctrines of the Democratic faith, and I just thought, as the editors of the Clearfield Republican were learned in all the mysteries of Democracy, and know on which platform Gen. formation, so that we may know where to find A VOTER.
