A contraband from Williamsburg, who came to Fortress Monroe with one of our chaplains, says that before our troops reached Williamsburg, 208 the slaves in the vicinity were told to beware of the "horrible Yankees, who had very small heads, with front teeth like horses, and were known to eat human flesh." Upon being asked whether the slaves believed this, be replied-"Dun'no; reckon not, 440 massa. Dem Yankees has not got no horns, but fights like de debble!"

James River is navigable for a 40-gun ship up to Jamestown, 32 miles above the mouth. Vessels drawing ten feet of water go up to Rockets, about a mile below the centre of the city of Richmond, and those drawing fifteen feet to Warwick, three miles below the city. Richmond is 150 miles from the mouth of James river.

The Breckinridge leaders, having brought the Government to the verge of ruin and involved the country in a terrible war, despite the peaceful tendencies of the times in which they bore rule, now propose to take the reins of power from the hands of the unquestionably loyal, and sail the ship on their own account.

A well dressed and rather pompous youth asked a lady who was reading in the cars, "Is this seat engaged madam ?" The answer was direct. "Yes, sir; and I am engaged too !" and the lady resumed her reading. A suppressed titter from some ladies close by caused the young man to make his exit.

A youthful member of a rifle corpse in a Scottish town, on his arrival home one evening, joyfully told his governor that he had just got his arms. "Airms," quoth the ancient, dryly, "I'm thinkin' gin the Erench come ye'll has mair need o' your legs.
