FRIGHTFUL RATLEDAD ACCIDENT.

A large number of Persons killed and their

About four o clock on Wednesday morning of last week, the fast line train going East on the Pennsylvania Central Rail Road. ran into a coal train at Thompsontown, 38 miles west of Harrisburg, causing a frightful loss of life, besides severly injuring a large number of other passengers. The responsibility of the accident seems to rest with those having charge of the coal train, which had stopped at the Station for water, public questions discussed. For this for the usual precaution was neglected of sending a signal-man to the rear to warn the approaching train. Whether he was running under orders, or was ignorant of the fast line train's time, is a question not yet

The passenger train consisted of one baggage and seven passenger cars. Owing to a short curve, the engineer did not discover the coal train until he was within fifty yards of it. He immediately reversed the engine and applied the patent breakers, but the check came to late to check the momentum of the heavy train. Scarcely more than a second elapsed before the locomotive had leaped entirely through the coal car, and half the next, shivering them to fragments, and dashing their contents in every direction, and turning over almost bottom up. The engine was adly shattered in the encounter, and the top of the steam chest having been broken off, the steam and water rushed out with great violence, tearing an irregular jagged hole in the ground from which the earth rose like a vast geyser, and settled in show-ers of mud upon the tops of the highest trees within a radius of sixty or seventy feet. The tender did not leave the track, and was but little injured.

The baggage car was elevated at the rear end from the fruck, when the whole momentum of the rest of the train was instantly expended in driving the baggage car so comdetely through the first passenger car that he frame work of one fitted closely and entirely within the other. Mr. McGreggor, the baggage master, was the only person in this car, escaping with but a few slight brui-The first passenger car was however, quite full, containing at least fifty persons, many of whom were women and children. These were, from the nature of the collision, either crushed under the baggage car, or driven in a mass to the rear of the car, the doors of which were locked, as if to make dea h doubly sure, and escape, so to speak, the more impossible. But most horrible to tell, the crash of wood, iron and glass were scarcely over when flames were discovered in the rear of the car, and within four minutes had enveloped this holocaust of dead, dying and mangled human beings in one common funeral pile.

It is not known whether the fire originated from the stove or from the gasometer, the latter being most probable. However, it started so quickly, and spread so rapidly, that the passengers, who immediately on the collision hurried from the rear cars to the front, only reached it in time to find the flames already under headway, and be compelled to listen to the horrid chorus of the i erackling flame of the cars, the agonizing own party to prove how well they can make groans of men, and the rending shricks and screams of women and children, powerless alike either to quench the flames or rescu-24th inst. was Mr. Books, a mail agent between Philadelphia and Harrisburg, who resides at Mifflin, and got on the train at that place. His injuries are internal, and thought to be severe. He was taken home on the westward train. A lady who had been rescued from the first passenger car, and taken to the station house, suffered very severe injuries. Surgical attendance was procured at an early hour, and all the rest of the wounded were doing well.

Great indignation and strong feeling was evinced by the passengers against the custom of locking car doors, as preventing all efforts at escape in the event of such a catastrophe. M'Clellan's History in Three Sentenc es. McClellan's failure as a commander, and his bankruptcy in every quality of a soldier, are history, the most shame ul in the annals of American polities, and the most humiliating in military biography. Attorney-General Hanna of Indiana, recalled it recently at Indianapolis, in a speech, whose brevity and truthfulness make it a compendium He said that "Old Abe!" exhausted every appliance known to human ingenuity to make him a gallant and successful warrior. While the people cried out to the President in the bitterness of their woe, "For God's sake, give us a General who will do something, who is equal to the demand upon him, who will not dig the grave of the nation within the sound of the enemy's canwhile the patience of Congress and of the Cabinet was wearing and finally wore out with the inordinate cost of vain display and of the failure of movements. Old Abe clung to him, through evil and through good report, hoping and praying that he might do better. By day and by night he curried and pampered him, kicked and coaxed him, scolded and praised him, tickled and lashed him, bathed and blanketed him, physicked and nursed him, patted and rubbed him, begged and cursed him, until finally, in the agony of despair, the worn-out President exclaimed: "He is great on dress parade, but not worth a curse in action!"

WE beg leave very respectfully to suggest to the Peace Democracy that they try their hand a little at patching up a peace in their peace with murderous triators. If they can t exactly declare their internal war a 'fail they may with great propriety demand an "immediate cessation of hostili-tics." Vallandigham writes the Chicago platform, and McClellan is frightened into it an innocent kick merely by way of keeping up appearances; but Val don't play marbles n the way, and he kicks McClellan overpoard, and the Woods, Medary, McMasters, Mulrony, and scores of other leaders follow Here is a chance for diplomacy-keep the dissolving institution together at least until November, so that the loval people of the North can get a fair chance at it Brethren of the Democratic faith, we say let there be peace among yourselves! -Chambersburg Repository.
