

RAFTSMAN'S JOURNAL.

CLEARFIELD, PA., OCT. 11, 1865.

The Arab and His Serpents. A Paris correspondent says: "I stopped to see some of the numerous shows, which are in full operation during the holidays. I found myself at last within a circle where an Arab was showing off with seven or eight great serpents. I wanted to turn and go away, but the crowd had become so great that I found I could not move, and was obliged to remain a witness of certainly one of the most curious and frightful spectacles ever offered to the public. The snake charmer was seated on the ground, after the fashion of his country, with his snakes all around him; two or three of them were of the most enormous size, as large as a full grown boar. He would take them up in his hands, let them wind around his legs, arms, body, neck and head; stick out their forked tongues and kiss him on the hands, the lips, the eye-lids, and present their heads or tails to him as he commanded them. While the spectacle was proceeding in the most successful way one of the largest snakes slipped off unnoticed by the Arab, or apparently so; and dragging itself along, got out of the crowd, everybody, you may be sure, giving him a clear space. Just out of the circle two dogs were playing together. The serpent no sooner espied them than he raised his head; and in an instant was busy winding himself around the body of one of the unfortunate animals. The poor dog literally screamed with fright. It was like the scream of human being. The Arab no sooner heard it and understood the cause, than he got up, went to the spot, and without touching the serpent, all at once spoke a few words, and the creature instantly unciled itself slowly until it left the dog free, and I assure you, one of the canine race never ran as fast as that dog did, as soon as he got loose. The surprise of the spectators of this scene knew no bounds, and pieces of silver were literally showered into the Arab's turban. A Cheap And Good Smoke House. A Western New York farmer publishes his plan of a small, cheap and good smoke-house, which, as it may contain some practical hints for our own readers, we append it:— No farmer should be without a good smoke-house, and such a one as will be fire proof and tolerably secure from thieves. Fifty hams can be smoked at one time in a smoke-house seven by eight feet square. Mine is six by seven, and is large enough for most farmers. I first dug the ground out below where the frost would reach, and filled it up to the surface with small stones. On this I laid my brick floor, in lime mortar. The walls are brick, eight inches thick and seven feet high, with a door on one side two feet wide. The door should be made of wood and lined with sheet iron. For the top I put on joists, two by four, set up edgewise, and eight and a half inches from centre to centre, covered with brick and put on a heavy coat of mortar. I built a small chimney on the top in the centre, arching it over and covering it with a single roof in the usual way. An arch should be built on the outside, with a small iron door, to shut it up, similar to a stove door, with a hole from the arch through the wall of the smoke-house, and an iron grate over it. This arch as much more convenient and better to put the fire in, than to build a fire inside the smoke-house, and the chimney causes a draft through into the smoke-house. Good corn cobs or hickory wood are the best materials to make a smoke for hams. The cost of such a smoke house as I have described is about $20.

Interesting Physiological Fact. An army correspondent writes: In the army and among returned soldiers, I have noted one fact in particular, somewhat at variance with the usual theories. It is that light haired men of the nervous, sanguine type, stand campaigning better than the dark haired men, of bilious temperament. Look through a raw regiment, on its way to the field, and you will find fully one-half of its members to be of black hair, dark skinned, big boned, bilious type. See that same regiment on its return for muster out, and you will find that black haired element has melted away, leaving at least two-thirds, perhaps three-fourths, of the regiment to be represented by red, brown and faxen hair. It is also noticed that men from the cities, slighter in physique, and apparently at the outset unable to endure hunger and privation, stand a severe campaign much better than men from agricultural districts. A thin, pale looking dry good clerk will do more marching and starving than many a plow boy, who looks muscular enough to take a bull by the tail and throw him over a stake and rider fence. How Different Nations Eat. The Maldivian Islanders eat alone. They retire in the most hinder parts of their houses, and then draw down the clothes that serve as blinds to their windows that they may eat unobserved. On the contrary the islanders of the Philippines are remarkably sociable. Whenever one of them finds himself without a companion to partake of his meal, he runs till he meets with one, and however keen his appetite may be, he ventures not to satisfy it without a guest. The tables of the rich Chinese shew a beautiful varnish and are covered with silk carpets very elegantly worked. They do not make use of plates knives and forks; every guest has two little ivory or ebony sticks which he handles very drolly. A Kanschatkan kneels before his guest; he cuts an enormous slice from a sea-calf; he crams it entire into the mouth of his friend, furiously crying out "Tana!" there! and cutting away what hangs about his lips, snatches and devours it with avidity.

A FATAL MISTAKE.—The Vedette, a Colorado paper, says that two men who were hanged near Gibson's Ferry, en route to Montana a few weeks ago, for having counterfeited gold dust in their possession, are now believed to be wholly innocent. They had received the dust in good faith from some one else, thinking it to be genuine. The case of these unfortunate men should be held up as a warning to all who would resort to so desperate a remedy as that of lynch law.

When is the mother of a large family like a ship at sea? When she is in the midst of a squall.
