HEADLEY'S HISTORY OF THE GREAT REBELLION—The late Rebellion stands out peculiar and extraordinary in human events; and the magnificent scale upon which the war has been conducted, constitute it one of the GRANDEST AND MOST BELLIGERENT CHAPTERS OF THE WORLD'S HISTORY. Mr. Headley, of all writers, is perhaps best qualified to portray the stupendous features of the mighty contest. His previous works on less momentous themes have placed him in the first position, as a complete and powerful delineator of war scenes and characters, and the magnitude and grandeur of the present subject, impart to his pen the fire and vigor of a yet more exalted inspiration, and furnish a scope for the high-lying exhibition of his peculiar genius for military description. Under his powerful pen the stirring scenes of the War pass in review with the vividness and distinctness of a present and living reality; while his great talent for a comprehensive analysis, enables him to embody everything of importance in a compact just suited to the public view. From no other source can so clear and comprehensive a representation of the grand march of events be obtained, so easily and agreeably, as from Mr. Headley's work. Other Histories have been issued before Grant's Report and other Official Documents are submitted to the Government, and are therefore unreliable. Mr. Headley has delayed the completion of this till these DOCUMENTS are ESSENTIAL TO AUTHENTICITY AND CORRECTNESS could be obtained. The Second Volume, completing this Work, will be issued in March, 1866. Agents wanted to engage in its sale in every town and county in the United States. Liberal inducements offered. MEMORIES.
'Tis but a little piece of bark,
From off that white birch tree;
Yet pleasant memories of the past,
It catcheth up to me.

The graceful waving bough o'er head,
The moss grown rocks below;
The fragrance of arbutus flowers
Yet moistened by the snow;

The rugged mountains slumbering near,
The sound of running streams,
The fat of lake, that through the top
Of distant forests gleams.

The violet dressed in heaven's own blue,
The fern leaves spread above,
The noise of winds, the song of birds,
The thousand things I love.

Ah me! that little piece of bark
My heart with memory fills,
Of nature in her loveliness,
Amidst the granite hills.

MUSCULAR CHRISTIANITY.
A GOOD STORY BY HENRY SEWELL.

In the autumn of 1857 I spent a few days in a country parsonage, and on the Sunday morning, at breakfast, the pastor's wife received a letter, which her tittering told us must be a titbit. "Ha, uncle," said she, "here are clerical doings exactly to your taste." The writer, a lady in a distant country, narrated that she had lately come into the next parish a new vicar—a very fine young man who at school had no superior, either in Greek or in boxing, and who at the University won honors for his classics and silver cups for his boating. He was beginning in earnest the work of an evangelist among a long neglected, vicious and brutal people. He had a plan and a will, but many worthy folk were fearing that his zeal was without knowledge or wisdom.

One of his first measures was to open a school in a remote part of the parish, and get the room licensed for a week-day preaching. But all the drunkards rose against such unheard-of proceedings. They would run after him, cursing, hooting, and discharging volleys of sods and other missiles. Finding reformation in vain, he adopted another course on the Wednesday evening in the week before I heard the story. Making a stand in the middle of the road at the entrance to the hamlet, just as the storm arose, and looking the savages in the face, he addressed them thus, in a firm, quiet voice, which commanded their attention:

"My good fellows, I have borne this patiently for some time, but now I must put a stop to it; and I'll do it in your own way. Choose your best man and we'll fight it out. If I beat, you'll give up."

They looked at him unbelievingly; but throwing his coat aside, he added: "I am in earnest—send your man." The ruffians put their heads together and then a burly giant stepped forth and made a furious dash at his reverend challenger, who quietly parried the unskillful blows, and played with them for a few seconds. But when a fist was planted in the peasant's chest, and he lay at full length on the ground. Quietly gathering himself up, however, he skulked away and joined his companions.

"Now send your next best, and I'll go through the lot of you."

Again their heads drew together, and another drew down his jacket, going to work however with a more cautious energy. But at once a stomacher stretched him on the road.

"Your next!"

"Bill, thee teck him." Bill eyed the hero across and shook his head.

"Thee, Jim." A shake of the head from Jim also.

"Dick, he'll teck the parson?" A shake moved decided, and stiff. "Nay, nay, I see thee hung fust!"

And now the first one who was vanquished stood forward, and, like a brave man called out:

"I say, parson, you're a rare young un, you ar. I see thee what, we're going to hear you preach." And they all followed him along the little street, said the writer, and heard the word quietly, adding, it remains to be seen what will become of the fight. What did come of it? I heard a long time afterward, that from that day the men doffed their hats and women curtsied and the children looked awe-stricken when they met or passed him; that the beer houses were nearly all shut up, and that a great moral and religious reformation was in progress. That gentleman had previously been the instrument of like changes in equally demoralized parishes.

I may add that a few years back he has deemed the fittest clergymen in the church to go out as a bishop to a scene of great personal danger in a heathen country—Manchester Examiner.

The singular disappearance of Mr. Hubble the Cashier of the Mississippi Bank, Sheldon, Vt., is at last accounted for. He turns out to be a defaulter in a large sum. The amount is stated as high as seventy-five thousand dollars. His embezzlements began years ago, but have been so covered by false entries and false footings as to elude observation until Wednesday. Hubble is reported to have been a fast, extravagant liver, his expenses exceeding those of almost any man in Franklin county. His whereabouts are still unknown by the officers of the bank.

Three hundred and thirty million dollars have been counted in the past year by the female clerks, under the supervision of Col. Frank Jones, of the Redemption Division in Gen. Spenser's Bureau of the Treasury, and not one dollar has been lost in the meantime.

Arrest of Counterfeiters.
The Pittsburgh Chronicle, of Dec. 29th, says: One of the most important arrests of counterfeiters which has been made in this State was effected in Erie on Monday, through the efforts of Detectives Cooley and Whitney of Erie. The arrest embraced five of the gang, who were located in New York, and the seizure of $28,000 in counterfeit Treasury notes. For some months past this gang has been doing a thriving business, and through their efforts the entire oil regions have been literally flooded with counterfeit money. Detectives Cooley and Whitney determined to discover the whereabouts of the gang, and, if possible, break it up by capturing the parties and their stock of money. After considerable trouble the officers ascertained that the gang had their headquarters near Buffalo, and at once placed themselves in "connection with it," in police parlance. One of the officers addressed a note by mail to the "chief," proposing to purchase a considerable quantity of the trash for the purpose of "shoving" it in the Oil Regions. After some negotiations the terms of sale were settled and the "chief" agreed to deliver the money by express at Erie. Either from fear of detection or of the failure of the promised remittance of his "stuff," the "chief," whose name is J. W. Sowles, concluded to send the money by Thomas Hale, one of the gang.

In due time, Hale, reached Erie, and immediately upon his arrival he was taken in custody by the detectives and lodged in jail before he had time to destroy any of the evidences of his guilt, or to communicate with his friends. The detectives then addressed a letter to Sowles, purporting to be written by Hale, informing him that he (Hale) had been suddenly taken ill, and had been unable to deliver the money. The letter also referred to the impossibility of secreting the money, and urged upon Sowles the necessity of immediate presence in Erie to make the delivery of the money in person. This letter had the desired effect, as Sowles started for Erie on the first train after its receipt. The train on which the "chief" had taken passage met with an accident, and a number of persons were injured. He, however, escaped unhurt, and arrived in Erie after several hours detention. Of course he was immediately arrested and conveyed to jail to keep Hale company.

The letter ruse having proved so successful the detectives determined to resort to it again. They accordingly took advantage of the accident to the train above referred to, and proceeded at once to Buffalo. On their arrival there they addressed a letter to the three remaining members of the gang, purporting to have been written by Sowles, in which they were informed that the "chief" had his leg broken by the accident to the train, and that he was lying at a hotel unable to be moved. In addition to this information, the letter demanded the immediate presence of the three, their prompt reply to the summons being necessary to prevent exposure. The following day the detectives had the satisfaction of meeting their men at the hotel named, and in a short time afterward the counterfeiters were safely lodged in the jail at Buffalo.

The skill and energy displayed by Messrs. Cooley and Whitney in their operations reflect the highest credit upon them. The result of their operations was the arrest of Sowles and Hale, and three others, whose names we did not ascertains, and the seizure of $28,000 in counterfeit money. Messrs. Cooley and Whitney arrived in this city from Erie last evening, with Sowles and Hale in charge. These prisoners were committed to the county jail, and will be tried at the next term of the United States Court in this city. The other members of the gang will be tried at Buffalo, New York.

DR. BUSBY.—Dr. Busby, the master of Westminister school, was celebrated for severe discipline. Though a severe, he was not an ill-natured man. It is related of him that one day when the Doctor was absent from his study a boy found some plums in his chair, and moved by his licentiousness, began to eat them, first, however, waggishly exclaiming, "I publish the bans of matrimony by my mouth and these plums." If any here present know any just cause or impediment why they should not be united, they are to declare it, or heretofore hold their peace," and then ate them. But the Doctor had overheard the proclamation, and said nothing until the next morning, when causing the boy to be brought up he grasped the well-known instrument, saying: "I publish the bans of matrimony between this rod and this boy. If any here present know any just cause or impediment why they should not be united, you are to declare it." The boy himself cried out, "I forbid the bans." "For what reason?" inquired the Doctor. "Because the parties are not agreed," said the boy. The Doctor enjoyed the validity of the objection urged by the boy's wit, and the ceremony was not performed. This is an instance of Dr. Busby's admiration of talent.

A Cincinnati merchant, on a trip down the Mississippi river, writes home that the outcry about the disorganization of labor, and the unwillingness of the negroes to work, is caused by cotton planters and speculators, who want to frighten away others from the business in order to augment their own profits. Nevertheless, Northern men are rushing in, and there will be a great cotton crop next year.

Much was said during the war about Massachusetts filling up her quota of troops with negroes and foreigners. It now officially appears that out of 131,116 three years men, furnished by that State to the army and navy, 907 were foreigners, and 6,049 colored troops. The State shows out 13,492 above all calls.

Popular Fallacies.
That warm air must be impure, and that, consequently, it is hurtful to sleep in a comparatively warm room, is an error. A warm room is as easily ventilated as a cool one. The warm air of a close vehicle is less injurious, be it ever so foul from crowding, than to ride and sit still and feel uncomfortably cold for an hour. The worst that can happen from a crowded conveyance is a fainting spell; while, from sitting even less than an hour in a still, chilly atmosphere, has induced attacks of pneumonia, that is, inflammation of the lungs, which often prove fatal in three or four days. It is always positively injurious to sleep in a close room where water freezes, because such a degree of cold causes the negatively poisonous carbonic acid gas of a sleeping-room to settle near the floor, where it is breathed and rebreathed by the sleeper, and is capable of producing typhoid fever in a few hours. Hence, there is no advantage, and always danger especially to weakly persons, in sleeping in an atmosphere colder than the freezing point.

That it is necessary to the proper and efficient ventilation of a room, even in warm weather, that a window or door should be left open; that is always hazardous to the sick and convalescent. Quite as safe a plan of ventilation, and as efficient, is to keep a lamp or a small fire burning in the fire-place. This creates a draft, and carries bad airs and gasses up the chimney.

That out-door exercise before breakfast is healthful, is also a mistake. From the very nature of things, it is hurtful, especially to persons of poor health; although the very vigorous may practice it with impunity. In winter the body is easily chilled through and through, unless the stomach has been fortified with a good warm breakfast, and in warm weather, miasmatic and malarious gasses and emanations speedily act upon the empty and weak stomach in a way to vitiate the circulation and induce fever and ague, diarrhoea, and dysentery. Entire families, who have arranged to eat breakfast before leaving the house and to take supper before sundown, have had a complete exemption from fever and ague, while the whole community around them was suffering from it from having neglected these precautions.

It is likewise an error to suppose that whatever lessens cough is "good" for it, and, if persevered in, will cure it. On the contrary, all coughs are sooner cured by promoting and increasing them; because nature endeavors by the cough to help bring up the phlegm and yellow matter which is in the lungs, as the lungs can not heal while that matter is there. And as it cannot be got rid of without coughing, the more coughing there is the sooner it is got rid of—the sooner are the lungs cleared out for the fuller and freer reception of pure air, which is their natural food. The only remedies which can do any good in coughs are such as loosen the phlegm, and thus less cough is required to bring it up. These remedies are warmth, outdoor exercise, anything which slightly nauseates. Hall's Journal of Health.
