MARCH WINDS.

Listen, Kitty my darling!

Here by the fireside bright—
Do you know what the winds are saying.

Abroad in the gusty night?
Moaning under the windows,
Like the voice of a child that grieves-Making the maples shiver

And creak at the cottage eaves. Listen, Kitty, my darling!
The winds are singing a song.
Of the Spring that is softly stealing From sunnier lands along.

The snowdrops smile as they hear it,

A smile for the Spring's sweet sake; And the shy little violets whisper:
"We hear! we are broad awake!" No matter, Kitty, my darling! Tho the March winds drearily blow, I am sure that the daisies are stirring Down under the sheltering snow.

In spite of the blustering weather, The crocus is budding again;
And the daffodills whisper together,
And wait for the April rain.

A THRILLING ADVENTURE.

We question whether, in the history of hair breadth escapes a parallel to the following can be found. The story was told to us by an old and valued friend, now residing n the country near the city, but whose early days were spent near the scene of the tragic adventure recorded here. We give the story as it was related to us in the words of the hero.

It was about the year 1805, that I settled in Virginia, near the falls of the Kanawha. The country at that time, was unbroken wilderness. But few settlements had been apart as to render vain all hope of assistance in case of an attack from hostile indians, numbers of whom still infested the neighporhood.

I lived there alone with my wife for several months unmolested, and by dint of perseverance, then young and hardy, had succeeded in making quite a clearing in the forest, which I planted in corn, and which promised an abundant yield.

One morning after we had despatched our humble meal, and had just prepared to venture forth upon my accustomed routine of abor, my attention was arrested by the tinkling of a cow bell in the corn fited.

"There," said my wife, "the cow is in the corn field." But the ear of the back woodsman beout by Daniel Kooser, as the same belongs to me, comes by education very acute, especially so and has only been left in care of said Thomas from the fact his safety often depends upon the nice cultivation of that sense. I was not so easily deceived. I listened. The sound was repeated. 'That,' said I, in reply to my wife's remark, "was not the tinkling of a bell upon the neck of a cow, but a decoy from some Indian, who wishes to draw me into ambush. Believing this to be the case, I took down my old musket, and seeing that it was properly loaded. I stole cautiously around the field towards the spot from which the sound seemed to proceed.

As I suspected, there, in a clump of bushes crouched an Indian, waiting for me to appear in answer to his decoy bell, that he might send the fatal bullet to my heart. I approached without discovering myself to him until within shooting distance, then I raised my piece and fired. The bullet sped true to its mark, and the Indian feel dead.

Not knowing but that he might be accompanied by others, I returned with all speed to my cabin, and having firmly barricaded the door, I watched all day from the port hole, in anticipation of an attack from the companions of the Indian I had killed. To add to the danger and seeming helplessness of my situation, I discovered that I had but one charge of powder left, I could make but one shot, then. If attacked by numbers, I should be entirely in their power. Determined to do the best with what I had, I poured out the last charge of powder and put it into the musket, and then waited for the approach of night, feeling sure of an attack.

Night came at last. A beautiful moonight night it was too, and this favored me greatly, as I would thereby be able to ob-

It was some two hours after nightfall, and Indians, when suddenly I was startled by the baying of my dog at the stable. I knew that the Indians were coming. The stable stood a little to the west of the cabin, and between the two were a patch of cleared ground upon which the light of the full moon fell unobstructed. Judging from the noise at the stable that they would advance from that direction, I posted myself at the port hole on that side of the cabin.

I had previously placed my wife on the cross pole in the chimney so that in case our enemes affected an entrance into our cabin, she might climb out through the low chimney, and effect her escape. For myself, I entertained no hope, but determined not to be taken alive, and to sell my life

With breathless anxiety I watched at the port hole. At length I saw them emerge from the shadow of the stable, and advance across the open ground toward my cabin. One-two-three-great Heavens! six stalwart Indians armed to the teeth, and urged on by the hope of revenge; and I alone to oppose them with one charge of powder. My case was desperate indeed. With quick and stealthy step, in close single file, they approached and were already within a few yards of the house, when a slight change in the movement of the forward Indian. changed the position of the six, so that a portion of the left side of each was uncovered. They were in range, and my aim would cover all. Quick as thought I aimed and fired. As the smoke cleared away, I could hardly credit what my senses showed remedy. Death alone cures it.

The Indians had killed my cow, and that you may be assured was no trifling loss, yet in my gratitude for my escape from the merciless savages, I would have been entirely willing to have made greater sacrifices. I was provided thus with arms and ammunition, taken from the six Indians, in case of | in this important article of daily consumpecond attack; but this fortunately, proved to be my last adventure with the savages.

Not one of the band had escaped to tell the tale, and incite his brethern to revenge the death of his comrades.

"Ah!" exclaimed the old man, while the tears stood in his eyes, at the memory of that eventful night, "that was a glorious shot-the best I ever made!" The hero of this adventure lived to see the rude wilderness where he had pitched his lonely cabin, transformed into smiling fields made by the whites, and they were so far and peopled with hardy and enterprising palefaces, among whom his last days were passed in peace and plenty, undisturbed by his old foes; but he don't tell us whether his wife ever came down from outthe chimney, or how he disposed of the five dead In-

> NATIONAL WEALTH, -An English writer tys that the commercial position of Great Britain depends mainly upon her coal and iron mines, and that if she was deprived of these sources of wealth, she would soon "sink to a third-rate power in the political scale." This confession is another admonition of the importance of encouraging the development of the coal and iron deposits of the United States, which are infinitely more inhabit the muscle of the hog more than the dullness of business has told severely upper that of any other animal or of man himself.

The Government would manifest criminal hostility or indifference to a grave national interest, if it failed to maintain a policy calculated to render this inexhaustible fund of national wealth available. It behooves us to increase the productive power of our country as rapidly as possible, and our mineral resources of this description are too important to be prudently overlooked.

THE POPE'S CONDITION .- In a letter from Rome, putlished in the London Fall Mall Gazette, it is stated that the Pope has had another bad turn during the last few days, and the doctors have been somewhat uneasy about him. His immediate attendants say they observe signs of growing feebleness in him, that his memory is shaken, and that he yields more than formerly to violent predilections and antipathies. This is said to be especially noticeable in regard to the impression of earlier years, which seem to be gradually coming back to him. He shows a marked leaning towards Italy and the house of Savoy. He has even, it is reported, been heard, in conversation with some of his more intimate friends, to propose the investiture of Victor Emmanuel as Vicar of the Holy See in the Romagna, the Marches and Umbria.

EXPORTS AND IMPORTS.-The figures hardly bear out the gloomy forebodings which have been indulged relative to our foreign and domestic trade. From and including 1855, we have exported in excess of our imports every year, and in five of the years so includserve the movements of the enemy as they ed, 1858, '60, '61, '62, '63, our exports of approached the cabin. cess of total imports. For 1864 our exports vet I had neither heard or seen a sign of the of domestic produce were within $8,222,388 of our importations, while our total exports were $12,171,021 greater; and this notwithstanding our imports jumped in that year to $328.514.559 from $252.187,587 in 1863, and $205,819,823 in 1862. The experts were greater in 1864 than in any former years excepting '57, '59, '60, '61 and '63, and the domestic exports were only exceeded by 1859, '60, '61, and '63. The record shows that we are improving.

It is vitally important that the industrial energies of our country should be properly cherished, and that the fatal policy of enriching foreign nations by the impoverishment of our domestic interests should not be tolerated a moment longer than is necessary to perfect the legislation required to modify it. Let the Government take care of the laboring masses of the country, and they will preserve the national credit.

How MIRRORS ARE MADE. - Probably few of our readers have a clear idea how the huge mirrors that are so fashionable and expensive are made. The plate-glass which comes from France or Germany is first polished by means of rouge brushes; next a bag containing the common potato, reduced by a pulverizing process to an almost impalpable powder is applied to the glass, the potato dust escaping through the meshes of the bag; then a plate foil is spread upon a setting bed of marble, and on it is placed the prepared quicksilver; the glass is then laid on the top of this and pistol lying on the bed by his side. He was 44 years old at the birth of Napolean I. He was 62 years old when the Federal Constitution was formed, and 84 when Abraham Lincoln was born.

A few days since a negro boy, through curiosity, went to the Catocin Furnace establishment, in Frederick county, Maryland, to witness the opertion of melting iron ore, and while looking down into one of the receivers, from which a large quantity of gas escapes, he was almost instantaneously suffocated, and at once lost all use of himself, tumbling headlong into the lake of fire and burning to death. All efforts to recover the boy from the liquid flames were rendersed impracticable, and he was left to his awful fate.

Stephen Girard, than whom no shrewder business man ever lived, used to say: have always considered advertising liberally and long to be the great medium of success in business, and the prelude to wealth. And I have made it an invariable rule, too. to advertise in the dullest time as well as the busiest, long experience having taught me that money thus spent is well laid ont; as by keeping my business continually before the public it has secured me many sales that I would otherwise have lost."

The Berlin correspondent of the London Cheap place, that. Times says: "Interesting intelligence reaches us from Russian America. The annual yield of gold in Siberia, it may not be amiss to add, amounts to about twenty-two that when she had occasion to whip him, million roubles."

In drifting from his old lead at Shullsburg, Wis., Major Davenport discovered a large opening whose walls seem to be a solid mass of lead. From his mine last year were taken 1,100,000 pounds of lead, worth $60,000 to 70,000. Amine at Stump Grove in the same district, was sold recently $10,-000, and three days after the sale the new owners broke into an opening eighteen feet up and down, containing a solid sheet of lead fifteen inches thick.

> Petroleum has begun to gush in Louisiana. An owner of land near New Iberia was offered by some explorer $200,000 for a locality ascertained to yield petroleum. He refused, but accepted $20,000 for one year's privilege of working his petroleum reservoir, with an interest in the profits. The Planter's Banner, too, notices the discovery of an abundance of petroleum about twelve miles from Lake Charles, in Calcasieu parish.
