INDIAN SUMMER.

Just after the death of the flowers, And before they are buried in snow, There comes a festival season, When nature is all aglow-Aglow with a mystical splendor That rivals the brightness of spring — Agiow with a beauty more tender Than aught which fair summer could bring.

Some spirit akin to the rainbow Then borrows its magical dies. And mantles the far spreading landscape In hues that bewilder the eyes. The sun from his cloud pillowed chamber, Smiles soft on a vision so gay.

And dreams that his favorite children, The flowers, have not passed away,

There's a luminous mist on the mountains, A light sture haze in the air.

A light sture haze in the air.

As if angels, whilst beavenward soaring,

Had left their bright robes floating there. The breeze is so soft, so caressing, It seems a mute token of love, And floats to the beart like a blessing From some happy spirit above.

These days, so serene and so charming, Aremulous, fearful enjoyment. Lise soft strains of music at night.
We know they are fading and fleeting.
That quickly, too quickly, they'll end.
And we watch them with yearning affection.
As at parting we watch a dear friend. Oh! beautiful Indian Summer!

Thou favorite child of the year-Thou darling, whom nature enriches With gifts and adornments so dear! How fain would we woo thee to linger On mountain and meadow awhile, For our hearts, like the sweet haunts of nature Rejoice and grow young in thy smile. Not alone to the sad fields of autumn Dost thou a last brightness restore,

But thou bringest a world-weary spirit Sweet dreams of its childhood once more. Thy leveliness thrills us with memories Of all that was brightest and best; Thy peace and serenity offer A foretaste of heavenly rest.

The Reduction of the Public Debt.

It has been a favorite theme with all Coperhead orators and organs to predict a direial condition of the national finances, to f retell the most hopeless ruin to all depart- | soup I wont eat it. ments of industry, from the crushing influence of the public debt. "We can never pay the National debt," asserted these promulgators of ill omens. The national debt "Well," said Barney, with all due solemnity, "all I can say is this, it's the regulations of the house, and d—n the dhrap else will ye git till ye's have finished the was described as certain to reach three hun- soup." dred thousand millions of dollars. This reneration would pass away before such a gobbled. and of indebtedness could ever be reduced in fractional parts. To pay the interest would require more of the resources of the people than they could spare from their buiness and continue prosperous.

Now, what do the real results show What has Congress actually accomplished in this connection, because Congress alone can open the sources whence the means are derived to pay the public debt? The answer is plain. In the first place, the estimation of the amount of the national indebtedness was too large by several hundreds of millions, while the rapid declension of the setual amount is unprecedented in the history of any nation in the world. No nation, so soon after a great war, commenced the reduction of its debt. Peace was scarcely declared, when the reduction of our debt was made to the amount of many millions. and continued to be reduced at the rate of the last six months no less a sum than $138,-308,574 has been subtracted from the aggregate of our indebtedness. While the national debt is thus reduced at the rate of two hundred and fifty millions a year, it is safe to calculate that, with equal good management, in ten or twelve years we shall be entirely free. Our national expenses will be lessened yearly, and our resources will increase as the systems of revenue are perfected and the industry of the people becomes more fully developed. The estimate we have given above may be too favorable; but any man who carefully examines the condition of our finances cannot but feel a justifiable pride as he contemplates the rapidity with which our Government is shaking itself free of its financial burden. Congress has legislated wisely and well, and to it the people owe almost entirely this unprecedented payment of a ponderous debt. The success of the great Union party of the land gives fresh vigor to our securities, and furnishes a pledge that the best will be done that can be done curred in saving the nation from ruin.

CHANGE IN THE FASHIONS IN FRANCE. It is bewildering, and almost ridiculous, says the London Queen, "to note the change last six weeks there has been a collapse; all the women who strictly follow the fashions do something when sent for.' appear to have suddenly shrunk, and, to outward appearance, have grown both thindecrease in width of both crinoline and petticoats, and the decrease in length of all out-door dresses; for it is an undisputed mous letter, I always sign my name to it.' to the apparent height of the figure. Still, with all their graceful folds and sweeping lines, no sensible woman will regret the disappearance of the absurdly long trains and sweeping dresses which have been worn during the during the past two years in the streets, for they proved so exceedingly inconvenient and uncleanly. The new fashion is infinitely more reasonable, for it leaves the trains for drawing-rooms, and insists on short petticoats in the streets and promenades.

A traveller in Montana relates that in rivers the speckled trout are so ravenous that they will bite at anything. He says they even followed him into the woods and bit at the spurs on his boots as he rode away. Fishy story, that,

"Madam, would you like to insure against accidents?" inquired the agent, at the same time exhibiting his tickets. "I got my ticket down to Kenosha."

"Not a railroad ticket, madam; I want to insure your life against accident.' "I'm going to Oshkosh to visit my darling darrer, who's married up there, and has just got a baby. The agent raised his voice a little. "Would you like to insure your life against accident?

"She's been married two years and a half, and that's the first child. It's a gal.

A gentleman once upon a time, entered a small shop in which vegetables were kept for sale, and inquired of the proprietor if he had any onions. "Onions, onions," repeated the puzzled vegetable dealer, "onions!no sir, I believe not!"
