AFTER.

After the shower, the tranquil sun ; After the snow, the emerald leaves; Silver stars when the day is gone; After the harvest, golden sheaves.

After clouds, the violet sky; After the tempest, the bull of waves; Quiet woods when the winds go by; After the battle, peaceful grave.

After the knell, the wedding bells; After the bud, the radiant rose : Joyiul greetings from sad farewells, After our weeping, sweet repose.

After the burden, the blissful meet After the flight, the downy nest, After the furrow, the waking seed ; After the shadowy river-rest !

Looking Under the Bed.

It is the habit of many persons to take a look under the bed before retiring for the night. Mrs. Evergreen, my beloved wife, indulges, if indulgence it may be called, in this peculiar practice. I do not object to it the performance upon myself; but when as ed to Mrs. Evergreen, when I have seen her t, and that the sooner she gave it up the better. To this gentle admonition my better-half invariably rejoins : "La, Evergreen ! what harm does it do?

"Evergreen," she will rejoin, "don't mention the idea, or I shall certainly do so. Come to think of it a man could very easily get into the clothes-basket !

Certainly he could, my dear, quite as easily as Falstaff. You should certainly include the clothes-basket, and by the-by, as well? ebo chimney ; why not look up that

At Fred's earnest solicitation I promised to sound Belle as to her sentiments, if a favorable opportunity presented itself, or at any rate to let her know, in an indirect way, that Fred was languishing in distress on her account, and thus give her no excuse for unnecessarily prolonging his misery. It so happened, however, that my services were not called into requisition. Belle Bronson, because of the sudden arrival at her house of some country cousins, was obliged to give you been? have offered her guests accommodation at So under the bed goes the candle, and no our house, but we were in the same predicasigns of humanity being discovered, Mrs. ment, An agricultural fair in the village Evergreen is able to repose in peace. But, had brought many strangers into the place. as already observed, this precautionary act and our own guests were so numerous that is sometimes forgotten, and I am myself I had given up my room to two of them, obliged to rise, light the lamp, and report. and had intended asking Fred Evans to let I've done it more frequently of late than is me pass the night with him. For this purpose I went to the hotel at a late hour, and proceeded at once to Fred's room but to my surprise found no one there. But this procedure is almost as bad, for I did not even notice that his trunks were gone, or suspect the fact which afterward getting out and getting in. If it were not became apparent, that "to oblige some lady guest for this night only." as the landlord the part of Mrs. Evergreen, by giving her expressed it, Fred had consented to give up "No. 20" and occupy a small room in the rear of the building. The gas being turned up I took a book to await his return, and hearing at last what appeared to be steps bear in mind that Mrs. Evergreen is of a approaching the room, and supposing it to sensitive nature, rather apprehensive and be Fred, in a momentary impulse to play a slightly superstitious, and that what I have joke upon him I slipped under the bed, a large and high one, intending to imitate a cat (of which animal I knew he had a detestation) so soon as he entered the room. The door opened, and I was on the point of say, I have for this long period refrained indulging in my ventriloquial faculty by giving a long-drawn micow, when from my hiding place I beheld Belle Bronson take quiet possession of the apartment ! My astonishment was so great, and the All young men, I suppose, have love at-fairs before they eventually fix their affec-tions on the one who is to bless their lot in I know that I had, and I don't regret | portunity for discovery and explanation was lost. I dared not move a hair, but hoped green is not present, and therefore I have sincerely that some excuse might take her no hesitancy in saying that if I had my life out of the room for a moment, and so facilitate may escape. She, however, locked the door, removed the key, and, as I knew by the sound, prepared to retire. Finally she kneeled down beside the bed. and clasping her hands and bowing her head (so fearfully near to mine that I could hear the soft twenties. I think I may go farther, and words in my very ear,) she offered up her confidently say that "Gus Evergreen" was evening prayer in a manner so full of feeling, and with such sweet accents of womanly tenderness and devotion, that I felt as if she was an angel bending over the vilest of As I before remarked, Mrs. Evergreen is not mortals. I almost felt her fingers graze my face as I held myself fearfully and silently against the wall, too far, just too far for her reach. Apparently satisfied that no danger was near her, she lay down in bed again and I counted her respirations till she was lost in slumber.

As for myself, sleep was utterly out of the question. I never was so wide awake in my life. How I lay upon that hard carpet and thought the night out !- thought of her, and her love for me; thought of myself, and my love for her. Yes, I was convinced from that moment that the hand of destiny was in it, and that a benign and allwise Providence has seen fit in this extraordinary way to open my eyes to the path of happiness and peace.

With morning light fresh fears came upon me lest my unconcious room-mate might vet peer beneath the bed for robbers, before she left the room ; but my fears were groundless. She rose and dressed expeditiously, for she was to join her cousins at an early breakfast, and she had overslept herself. When at last she took the key, unlocked the door, and departed. I lost no time in slipping out of my shameful place of concealment, and escaping from the hotel. On the stairs I met Fred coming out of his room, who exclaimed :
