NO BABY IN THE HOUSE

No baby in the house, I know-'Tis far too nice and clean ; No toys by careless fingers strewn Upon the floor are seen, No fager marks are on the panes, No scratches on the chairs,

No wooden men set up in rows, Or marshalled off in pairs; No little stockings to be darned All ragged at the toes, No pile of mending to be done, Made up of baby-clothes; No little troubles to be soothed,

No little hands to fold, No grimy fingers to be washed, No stories to be told;

No tender kisses to be given, No nicknames, "Love" and "Mouse," No merry frolics after tea— No baby in the house.

TO LET-INQUIRE WITHIN.

Two young damsels and a spinster aunt tame in, and after a lengthy inspection of the premises, came to a state council in the

"I like the house very much," said the spinster aunt solemnly, "and with a few alterations I will engage it for my brother's family.

"Very good, madam," said Nahum, rubting his hands, and scenting a speedy termination to his trials. "Name 'em.

"The door handles must all be guilded, and I should like the house newly papered in velvet and gold, and repainted, and the partition between the parlors taken down and replaced by an arch, and an extension dining room built on behind, and a bay style of range in the kitchen and a dumb wairer put in, and new bronzed chandaliers throughout, and another furnace in the sub-cellar,

"Hold on, ma'am—just hold on one min-ute," said Nahum, feebly gasping for breath. "Wouldn't you like the old house carried away, and a new one put in its place? I think it would be rather less trouble than to make the trifling alterations you suggest.'

Sir!" said the spinster loftily. "I don't think we can agree ma'am." "Very well-Very well-come girls." With prim dignity the lady marshaled her two charges out, muttering something about "the extortionate ideas of landlords Nahum wildly rumpling his iron grey hair with both hands, soliloquized: "Well, if Job had been alive and had a house to let, there never would have been any book of Job written. There goes that everlasting bell again; I'll haul it out by the roots if this thing goes on much longer. I'll tear down the bell and put the place up at auc-

Another lady, but quite different from the other-a slender, little, cast down lady with a head that drooped like a lilly of the valley, and a dress of brown silk that had been mended, and darned and turned and retrimmed, and even Nahum Briggs, man and batchelor as he was, could see how very shabby it was. Yet she was pretty, with big blue eyes and shining brown hair and cheeks tinged with a fair, fleeting color, bloomed in vivid carmine. And a golden haired little lassie clung to her dress, as like her tiny lilly buds to a bloom chime of flow-

As Nahum Briggs stood looking at her there came back to him the sunshiny days of youth- a field of blooming clover crimsoned the June like waves of blood, and a blue-eyed girl leaning over the fence, with her bright hair barred with level sunset gold, and he knew he was standing face to face with Barbara Wylie, the girl he had quarreled with years and years ago, and whose blue eyes had kept him an old bachclor all his life long.

asked timidly, with a little quiver in her lips. "I believe it is Barbara Wylie.

She looked up startled with a sudden flush of recognition. And then Barbara turned very pale, and began to cry, with the little golden haired girl clinging to her skirts and

"Mamma-mamma what's the matter

mamma?" Nothing, now," said Barbara, resolutely brushing away the tears. "If you please Mr. Briggs, I will look at the house. I am a poor widow now, and very poor, and-and I think of keeping a boarding house to earn

We'll talk about the rent afterward," Mid Nahum, fiercely swallowing down a big lump in his throat that threatened to choke him. "Come here little girl and kiss me. lused to know your mamma when she wasn't much bigger than you are.

Barbara, with her blue eyes still drooping, went all over the house without finding a word of fault, and Nahum Briggs walked at her side, wondering if it was really fifteen years since the June sunshine lay so brighty on the clover fields.

"I think the house is beautiful," said neek Barbara, "will you rent it to me, Na-"Well, yes," said Nahum thoughtfully

I'll let you have my house, if you want it Barbara. With the privilege of keeping a few boarders?" "No ma'am !" Barbara stopped and looked wistfully at him-"But I don't think you understand how

"Yes, I do." Briggs." "And that I cannot afford to take the house without the privilege of taking board

"I'll tell you what, Barbara," said Mr. Briggs, dictatorially, "I'll give you the privilege of keeping just one boarder, and him you will have to keep all your life long, if you once take him.

"I don't think I quite understand you, Nahum Briggs," but she blushed very becomingly, and we are rather inclined to think she told a naughty little fib.

"What do you say to me for a boarder, Barbara?" said the old bachelor, taking both the widows hands in his. "Barbara, we were young folks once, but there is no reason why we should be old fools now. I like you as well as I ever did, and I'll do my best to be a good husband to you, and a good father to your little girl, if you'll be my Barbara blushed again, and hesitated, but Nahum was not to be eluded thus. "Shall I take down the To Let,' Bar-

"Yes," she murmured, almost under her breath.

So Nahum went deliberately out and coolly tore down the bill to the great astonishment and disappointment of a party of rabid house-hunters who were just ascending the steps.

'And when shall we be married, Barbahe demanded. "In the summer, perhaps," said Mrs.

Barbara, shily. To-morrow." said Nahum decisivelyand to-morrow it was.

"Upon my word, Barbara," said Nahum, on the first day of May, as he watched his wife's blooming face behind the coffee urn, 'you can't think how much jollier it is with you for a houskeeper, than that hag, Mrs. Parley.

Barbara only laughed and said "he was a dear, good old stupid.

So the probabilities are that neither Mr. Nahum Briggs nor his brown stone house will be in market again as-"To Let-Inquire Within.'

AN ECCENTRIC DIVINE.—The Rev. Zeb Twitchell was the most noted Methodist preacher in Vermont for shrewd and laughable sayings. In the pulpit he maintained a suitable gravity of manner and expression, and out of the pulpit he overflowed with fun. Occasionally he would, if emergency seemed to require, say something queer in a sermon for the sake of arousing the flagging attention of his hearers. Seeing that his audience was getting asleep, he paused in his discourse and discussed as follows:

"Brethren, you haven't the least idea of the sufferings of our missionaries in the new settlements, on account of the mosquitoes. The mosquitoes in some of these regions are enormous. A great many of them weigh a pound, and they will get on the logs and bark when the missionaries are going along.'

By this time all ears and eyes were open, and he proceeded to finish his discourse. The next day one of his hearers called him to account for telling lies in the pulpit.

"There never was a mosquito that weighed a pound." he said. "But I didn't say one of them would weigh a pound. I said a great many, and I think a million of them would. "But you said they barked at the missionaries.

"No, no, brother, I said they would get on the logs and bark.

OUR TURN MUST COME. - "Generation after generation," says a fine writer, have felt as we now feel, and their lives were as active as our own. They passed like a vapor, while sature wore the same aspect of beauty as when her Creator commanded her to be. They will have the same attractions for our offspring yet unborn, that she had once for us as children. Yet a little while and all will have happened. The throbbing heart will be stifled, and we shall be at rest. Our funeral shall find its way, and prayers will be said, and we shall be left alone in silence and in darkness for the worms. And it may be, for a short time we shall be spoken of, but the things of life will creep in. and our names will soon be forgotten. Days will continue to move on, and laughter and This house is to be let I believe?" she song will be heard in the room in which we died; and the eyes that mourned for us will be dried, and glisten again with joy, and even our children will cease to think of us and will not remember to lisp our name."

THE ELDEST DAUGHTER AT HOME. - To be able to get dinner, to sweep the room. to make a garment, to tend a baby, would add greatly to the list of a young lady's accomplishments. Where can we behold a more lovely sight than the eldest daughter of a family, attending in the sweet simplicity of her new womanhood, by the side of her my daily bread. I hope the rent is not very toiling, careworn mother, to relieve and high?" aid her? Now she presides at the table, now diverts half a score of little folks in the library. She can assist her younger brothers in their sports, or the elder ones in their studies; read the newspaper to her weary father, or smooth the aching brow of her tevered mother. Always ready with a helping hand, and a cheerful smile for every emergency, she is an angel of love and bless ing to the home circle. Should she be called out of it to originate a home of her own, would she be any less lovely or self-sacrifi-

> PARTICULAR DIRECTIONS. - A Lady occupying room letter B, at a hotel, wrote on the slate as follows: "Wake letter B at seven; and if letter B says, 'let her be,' dont let her be, nor let letter B be, because if you let letter B be, letter B will be unable to let her house to Mr. B. who is to be on hand at half-past seven.

The porter, a better boot-black than orthographist, after studying the above all night, did not know whether to wake letter B, or to "let her be.

"I say, what are you about—sweeping out the room?" "No," answered Pat, "I'm sweeping out the dirt."

'A soft answer turneth away wrath,' as the man said when he hurled a squash at his enemy's head.

Glycerine and its Uses.

This article is among the comparatively recent discoveries of science. Glycerine, in a pure state, is a clear, colorless, syrupy fluid, of a very sweet taste, being the sweet principle contained in oil and fatty bodies. Its first introduction into medical use was in the year 1844, in the London Hospital, for diseases of the skin; it keeps the same moist and soft, and excludes the air without evaporation. The Russians apply it to the face and ears as a protection against intense cold, as it does not congeal at any temperature. In ophthalmic surgery, frequent and extensive use is made of glycerine, also, in certain conditions of deafness. It may be used as an adjuvant to the bath, softening the skin pleasantly, and has a high reputation as a lotion for the complexion; but for all these purposes it should be perfectly pure. It was not known in a pure state until the discovery of Mr. Tilghman, of Philadelphia, patented in 1854. There are two manufacturers who make the best and purest article-one in London, and the other, of equal celeurity in Philadelphia.

In the arts, the uses of glycerine are manifold in keeping the colors of organic bodies; in photography, to keep pictures in an un-finished state. At the museum of the Fac-ulty of Medicine of Paris, glycerine has been recently adopted as a preservative fluid for flowers and fresh plants. Mr. Tichborne has thus kept flowers for two years, and then made from them a water, with a perfume equal to that of the flowers of the season. Mustard may be kept for any length of time by its admixture. Manufacturers of chewing tobacco find it valuable in maintaining the softness of their products, while imparting sweetness to the taste. Frequent a very beautiful article has been produced.

WOMAN.-Mrs. Stevens, the sweet story writer, has somewhere thrown off this excel-

"Woman, woman!-truly she is a miracle. and something of folly-annoyed by a dew drop, fettered by the touch of a butterfly's wing, ready to faint at the rustle of a beetle. The zephyrs are too rough, the showers too heavy, and she is overpowered by the perfume of a rose-bud. But let real calamity come, rouse her affection, enkindle the spirit of her heart, and mark her then. How her heart strengthens itself; how strong is her purpose. Place her in the heat of battle, give her a child, a bird, anything she loves or pities, to protect, and see her, as in a related instance, raising her white arms as a shield, and as her own blood crimsons her upturned forehead, praying for life to protect the helpless. Transplant her into the dark of the earth, awaken her energies to action and her breath becomes a healing and her presence a blessing; she disputes inch by inch, the stride of the stalking pestilence, when man, the strong and brave shrinks away pale and affrighted. Misfortune daunts her not: she wears away a life of silent endurance, or goes forward with less timidity than to her bridal. In prosperity she is a bud full of imprisoned odors, waiting but for the winds of adversity to scatter them abroad-pure gold, valuable but untried in the furnace. In short, woman is a miracle, a mystery,

OUR DESTINY .- It cannot be that earth is man's only abiding place. It cannot be that our life is a bubble cast up by the ocean in the United States. We are born for a higher destiny than that of earth. There is a realm where the rainbow never fades; where the stars will be spread out before us like the islands that slumber dom before the emancipation proclamation on the ocean, and where the beautiful beings that pass before us like shadows, will stay forever in our presence.

"Ir."-There is much virtue in your If If a man would do this or that or the other, why then-and so on ad infinitum. The last If we have seen going the rounds is this: "There are twenty millions of people in the North. If each one of these would destroy a five cent note daily, it would amount to a million dollars in a day towards the removal of the national debt. If this were done every day for a year, it would diminish the debt by three hundred and sixty-five millions of dollars yearly, which is more than the whole internal revenue produces. We know a man who thinks it is his duty to burn a five cent bill every day on this account. It is less than the tax on a glass of whisky." Now, If there had been no debt there would have been no stamps.

If there had been no stamps this idiotic proposition would never have been made. In short, if the moon were made of green cheese it would be good to eat, you know!
