THE LIGHT AT HOME.

The light at home ! how bright it beams When evening shadows round us fall, And from the lattice far it gleams. To love, and rest, and comfort all. When wearied with the toils of day, And strife for glory, gold, or fame. How sweet to seek the quiet way, Where loving lips will lisp our name, Around the light at home.

When through the dark and stormy night The wayward wanderer homeward flies, "h through the forest gloom he spies !

The light at home ! How still and sweet It peeps from yonder cottage door-The weary laborer to greet-When the rough toils of day are o'er. Sad is the soul that does not know The blessings that the beams impart-The cheerful hopes and joys that flow, And lighten up the heaviest heart Around the light at home,

THE WAY TO KEEP HIM.

"Out again to night?" said Mrs. Hayes, fretfully, as her husband rose from the tea table, and donned his great coat.

Yes, I have an engagement with Moore, I shall be in early, have a light in the library. Good night." And with a careless nod. William Hayes left the room.

"Always the way," murmured Lizzie Hayes, sinking back upon the sofa. "Out every night. I don't believe he cares one bit about me now, and yet we have been married only two years. No man can have a more orderly house, I am sure, I never go anywhere, I am not a bit extravagant; and yet I don't believe he loves me any more. Oh, dear, why is it? I wasn't rich; he did not marry me for money, and he must have loved me then; why does he treat me with so much neglect?" And with her mind fill-ed with such frightful queries, Lizzie fell asleep on the sofa.

Let me paint her picture as she lay there. She was a blonde, with a small graceful figure, and a pretty face. The hair which showed by its rich waves its natural tendeney to curl, was brushed smoothly back, and gathered into a rich knot at the back—'twas such a bother to curl it.she said-her cheek little figure in a tasty, bright silk dress, smooth curls, and oh I such a lovely blush and smile, stood ready to welcome William as he came in ; and tea-time passed as the morning meal had done. After tea there was no movement as usual towards the hatrack. William stood up beside the table, lingering and chatting, until Lizzie arose. She led him to the light, warm parlors, in their pretty glow of tasteful arrangement, and and the proceeds. It seems triffing, pre-drew him down on the sofa beside her. He posterous, to imagine the products of a sinfelt as if he was courting over again, as he gle hen will pay the subscriptions; perhaps watched her fingers, busy with some fancy needle work, and listened to the cheerful voice he had loved so dearly two years before.

"What are you making, Lizzie?" "A pair of slippers. Don't you remem-ber how much you admired the pair I work-ed for you-oh! ever so long ago?"

Lizzie's face saddened for a moment as she thought of the last two years, and how

"I wonder if you love music as well as you did then?

"Of course I do. I very often drop into Mrs. Smith's for nothing else than to hear the music.

"I can play and sing better than Mrs. Smith," said Lizzie, pouting.

"But you always say you are out of practice when Lask you.

"I had the piano tuved this morning. Now open it and we will see how it sounds. William obeyed joyfully, and tossing aside her sewing. Lizzie took the piano stool. She had a very sweet voice, not powerful, but most musical, and was a very fair performer on the piano.

"Ballads, Lizzie?"

A New way of Paying Subscriptions. The following is an amusing account of the way a farmer was taught how cheaply he could take the paper. The lesson is worth pondering by a good many men "we wot of.

"You have hens at home of course. Well, I will send you my paper for one year, for the product of a single hen for one season; posterous, to imagine the products of a sinit won't but I make the offer.'

"Done," exclaimed farmer B. "I agree it," and appealed to me as a witness of to it," the bargain.

The farmer went off apparently much elated with his conquest; the editor went on his way rejoicing.

Time rolled around, the world revolved on its axis, and the sun in its orbit as it formerly did; the farmer received his paper regularly and regaled himself with the information from it, and said he was surprised at the progress of himself and family in general infor mation.

Some time in the month of September, J she thought of the last two years, and now little music she had made for his loving heart, gradually wearing it from its allegiance, and then she said: tor, extending his hand, his countenance lit up with a bland smile; "take a chair and be seated: fine weather we have;'

"Yes, sir, quite fine indeed," he answered, and then a short silence ensued, during which our iriend B. hitched his chair backward and torward, twirling his thumbs ab-stractly, and spit profusely. Starting up quickly, he said, addressing the editor. have brought you the proceeds of that hen.

It was amusing to see the peculiar expres-sion of the editor, as he followed the farmer down to the wagon. I could hardly keep my risibles down.

When at the wagon the farmer commenced handing over to the editor the products. amounting to eighteen pullets, worth twelve and a half cents each, and a number of dozens of eggs, making in the aggregate at the least calculation, one dollar and fifty cents more than the price of the paper. "No need," said he, "of men not taking family newspaper, and paying for it too. don't miss this from my roost, yet I have paid for a year's subscription and over. was pale, and the whole face wore a discontented expression. Her dress was a neat chintz wrapper, but she wore neither collars nor sleeves. "What's the use of dressing up just for William?

Lizzie slept soundly for two hours, and then awoke sud lenly. She sat up, glanced at the clock, and sighed drearily at the prosject of the long interval still to be spent before bedrime.

The library was just over the room in which she sat, and down the furnace-flue, through the register, a voice came to the young wife's cars. It was her husband's.

Well. Moore, what's a man to do? I must have pleasure somewhere. Who would have fancied that Lizzie Jarvis, so pretty, sprightly, and loving, could change to the fretful dowdy she is now? Who wants to stay at home to hear his wife whining all the evening about her troublesome servants, and her headache and all sorts of others? She's got the knack of that drawling whine so pat, 'pou my life I don't believe she can speak pleasantly." Lizzie sat as if stunned. Was this true? She looked in the glass. If not exactly dowdy, her costume was certainly not suitable for an evening with only William to admire. She rose and softly went to her room, with bitter, sorrowful thoughts, and a firm resoation to win back her husband's heart, and then, his love regained, to keep it.

The next morning William came into the breakfast room with his usual careless manner, but a bright smile came on his lips as he saw Lizzie. A pretty chintz, with neat collar and sleeves of snow white muslin, with a wreath of soft full curls, had really metamorphosed her; while the blush her husband's admiring glance called up to her cheek did not detract from her beauty. At first William thought there must be a guest, but glancing around, he found they were

"Come, William, your coffee will soon be " said Lizzie in a cheerful, pleasant

"It must cool till you sweeten my breakfast with a kiss," said her husband, crossing the room to her side, and Lizzie's heart bounded as she recognized the old lover's tone and manner.

Not one fretful speech, not one complaint fell upon William's ear through the meal. The newspaper, the usual solace of that hour, lay untouched, as Lizzie chatted gaily on every pleasant topic she could think of. warming by his grateful interest and cordial manner.

"You will be at home to dinner?" she said, as he went out.

"Can't to-day, Lizzie ; I've business out town ; but I'll, be home early to tea. Have something substantial, for I don't expectto dine. Good bye." And the smiling look, warm kiss, and lively whistle were a marked contrast to his lounging, careless sait of the previous evening. "I am in the right path," said Lizzie in a low whisper. "Oh, what a fool I have been for the last two years! 'A fretful dowdy!" William, you shall never say that again.

Lizzie loved her husband with a real wifely devotion, and her lips would quiver as she hought of his confidence to his friend Moore ; but like a brave little woman, she stifled back the bitter feelings, and tripped off to perfect her plans. The grand plano, silent for months, was opened, and the linen covers taken from the furniture, Lizzie saying, "he shan't find any parlors more pleasant than his own, I'm determined." Tea came, and William came with it. A

THE POOR IN NEW YORK .- The annual report of the Board of Health gives a $381,796; tavern licenses, $257,462; the view of the way the poor live. Sixteen thousand tenement houses, that is rookeries offices, $163,250; tax on gross receipts, devoted to this class, contain five hundred $132,472; tax on foreign insurance compaand fifty thousand inhabitants, being eight nies, $128,758. From these few items is families to a house, besides those who live in stable lofts and attics. Some of the large tenements contain a population of eight year was procured from a large number of hundred. In the Fourth ward two hundred other items such as taxes on wills and deeds, and ninety thousand persons live on a square on bank dividends brokers, auction duties mile. The mortality from this mode of ex- and commissions, from licenses for eating istence is twice the rate in Liverpool, where houses, billiard rooms and bowling saloons, the heaviest population is one hundred and peddlers, brokers, patent medicine dealers, thirty-eight thousand to a square mile. and a large variety of other sources, inclu-Many of these tenements have no rooms sufficiently lighted to permit of sewing on a From all these sources the large sum of a cloudy day without the aid of candles. These, as report says, are overflowing, and still there is a demand for holes to creep into. We forbear any further recital of these horrors, which, if read in the history of Canton or of Pagan Rome, would seem incredible ; but here they are but a common fact in our daily experience.

"Sir," said a fierce lawyer, "do you on your solemn oath declare that this is not your handwriting?'

"I reckon not," was the cool reply. "Does it resemble your handwriting?" "Yes, sir, I think it don't." "Do you swear it don't resemble your writing?"

Two of 'EM.-A young fellow whose better half had just presented him with a pair of bouncing twins, attended church one Sunday. During the discourse, the clergy-man looked right at our innocent friend and said, in a tone of thrilling eloquence. "Young named Argine, Rachel, Palles and Judith man, you have an important responsibility thrust upon you." The newly fledged dad, supposing that the preacher alluded to his peculiar home event, considerably startled the andience by exclaiming, "Yes, two of them.

The State Revenue.

It may interest, says the Ledger, to know from what source the large revenue of the State of Pennsylvania is derived, now that the State taxes on real estate are abolished. Let us take a few items from one of the latest reports on the subject and place them in the order of their magnitude. Thus for example, the tax on corporation stocks yielded last year, $1.258,960; the tax on tonnage $401,741; the commutation of the tonnage tax, $360,000; retailers' licenses, $357,191; collateral inheritance tax. tax on loans, $278,482; tax on emoluments collected the large amount of $3,620,033. Balance of the income of the State last on bank dividends brokers, auction duties ding $150 from "cases of conscience.

It will, perhaps, be equally interesting to notice some of the larger items of expenditure to which this revenue is devoted. A few of them, ranked in the order of their magnitude are as follows: Interests on loans. $1,892,105; expenses of Government, $669,000; relief of the Chambersburg sufferers, $487,608; for charitable institutions, $474,616; common schools, $324,308; rensions and gratuities, $164,536; State Capitol and grounds, $121,785; House of Refuge, $92,500; penitentiaries, $41,085. Following these are a variety of other small expenditures. The total expenditures, how-ever, left the large margin of $1,867,650 surplus to be applied to the reduction of the State debt.

PLAYING CARDS.-Cards were invented in 1391 by Jacquemin Grugenmour, to amuse King Henry VI, of France, who at that time was mad. The ace was made the best card in the pack, being derived from the French word Argent, signifying the money, and to show that a king could not get along without it, as a menial card back-ed by the ace would triumph over a king-The kings were called David, Alexander, Cæsar and Charlamagne : the queens were the varlets or knaves represented the squires to the kings and were named Launcelot, Ogier, Renard and Hector: tens, nines, &c., represented the foot soldiers. The ace of clubs was so named and formed to represent a clover leaf, and to signify to the king that a good general would encamp his army where pasturage was plenty. The ace of spades represented the halberts carried by foot soldiers ; the ace of diamonds represented the heads of the arrows used by the cross-bowmen, and the ace of hearts repre-

-A matter of absorbing interest, according to a cotemporary, wos the case of a man who borrowed money at five per cent a month. The interest absorbed a large farm in a few years. -A man in Memphis has lodged a formal complaint before a magistrate that his wife is in the daily habit of cowhiding him. The magistrate recommended him to hide himself in future.

with lameness, was assisted into his sleigh at one of the horse railroad stations in Boston, a day or two since, by a couple of young men, who, under cover of this act of seeming kindness, relieved his pocket of the sum of $1,500.

-When a woman won't, she won't. You can't force them to do anything. Indeed, the most of them are very much like the old man's wife, who he said "was a woman of so much contrabunction, that when she took a compinion of her own, there was no such a thing as consequentioning her."

-A delighted father in South Bend. Ohio. rushed into the Mayor's office, the other morning, and aunounced that during the previous night a fellow came stalking into his

-An Irish girl was ordered to hang-the wash clothes on the horse in the kitchen to dry. Upon interrogating the girl the reply was: "Och to be sure, ye tould me to hang the clothes upon the horse in the kitchen, and the baste is the kindest I iver saw, sure.'

-A good story is told of a rustic youth and a buxom country girl who sat facing each other at a husking party. The youth smitten with the charms of the beautiful maiden only venturing a sly look, and now and then touching Patty's foot under the ta-ble. The girl determined to make the lad express what he appeared so warmly to feel, bore with these advances a little while in si-lence, when she cried out, "Look here, if you love me why don't you say so; but don't dirty my stockings." sented the courage of the knights and sol-
