Not Afraid to Work.

"Come in," said a voice from within. Mr. Gay looked up as the door opened, and seeing a strange boy, he told him he would come to him in a few minutes. Having ended his writing, he asked him what he wanted. "Please, sir, do you want a boy in your

"Why," said Mr. G., "I don't know but that we do. What can you do?' "Anything, sir, that you have for me to I am not afraid to work."

do. I am not afraid to work."
"What is your name, and where do your parents live?" asked Mr. G. "My name, sir, is Harry Scott. father and mother are both dead. I live with a woman who knew my mother. She is very kind to me, but she is poor, and cannot keep me without work. I have tried at a great many places to get work, but nobody wants poor boys."

"Have you no friend to speak for you? asked Mr. Gay. Harry looked down for a moment, and turned his old cap around his hand. His face grew bright as he drew from his pocket a small well worn Bible. He handed it to Mr. G., saying, "That book will tell you, sir, of the only friend I have to speak for me. It was a gift of my mother's.'

Mr. G. took the book. On the first leaf was written-"This is your mother's dying gift. Read it daily, my son, and the orphan's God will be your friend.

He closed the book and laid it on the table, and then said-"Well, Harry, you may make a trial in my office. Come in the morning, and if you suit me I will have you; but I shall want you to sleep in the office till George is able to come back."

'Thank you, sir," said Harry. "I will be here early in the morning, and I will try to make myself useful." Putting his Bible in his pocket, he went homeward with a happy heart.

For a long time Mr. Gay sat where Harry had left him. He was thinking very gravely. The sight of that worn Bible, and the marks he had seen in it, had brought back early times. He, too, had once had a Christian mother. She had passed away long since. Yet her counsels to "seek the Lord early were sounding in his ears. Life's busy cares and scenes had led him to forget her words. He thought of it long and bitterly; but even now business is taking his time and attention, and the subject was again put off.

The next morning Harry was at the office early, ready to make himself useful, as he said. By his active and willing obedience he soon made many triends.

He was there about two weeks, when Mr. Gay gave orders for quicker work in the office, as there was a large amount to be done in a few days. That night, before Harry went to sleep, he thought he would get up very early in the morning, so as to have ev-erything in order early. "It is but little that I can do," said he; but I will do what I can." And with this he soon fell asleep.

After a long time he awoke. It looked very dark. He thought it could not be near morning yet. He was just falling asleep when the clock strack five. "Time to get up," thought he; and suiting the action to the word, he was soon dressed. He lighted I is little lamp, real a chapter in his Bible, and then knelt for a few moments at his bedside, to seek God's blessing on the day and its work.

Upon going into Mr. Gay's room, he set to work to light the fire. Then he looked after the other fires, giving them the care they needed before he began to sweep the office. He had nearly done sweeping when he heard a step at the door, and looking around he saw Mr. Gay standing at the

"Well, my boy, how is this, that you are up so early?" It is but little more than five o'clock."

"Why, sir," said Harry, "I heard you say you had a great deal to do, and I am going to help all I can. "Well, well," said Mr. Gay, "I see you told the truth when you said you were not afraid to work. What made you think of getting up?" That everything might be ready early, sir." he answered. "There is one verse in my Bible that I love to think of every day; and I think it helps me to do right. It is this: 'Whether therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of "A faithful boy will become a good and useful man," said Mr. Gay, as he passed to his room. "Strange," thought he, "how that boy seems to live out what the Bible teaches! I must try to seek to do this myself." For two hours business was set aside that he might seek after lasting good. Let us hope that the example of Harry may still be blessed.
