THERE'S WORK ENOUGH TO DO.

The blackbird early leaves its nest To meet the smiling morn,
And gathering tragments for its nest
From upland wood and land.
The busy bee that wings its way Mid sweets of varied hue, At every flower would seem to say-"There's work enough to do"

The cowslip and the spreading vine, The daisy in the grass, The snowdrop and the eglantine, Preach sermons as we pass. The ant, within its cavern deep,

Would bid us labor too, And writes upon its tiny heap— There's work enough to do." To have a heart for those who weep, The sottish drunkard win To rescue all the children, deep In ignorance and sin :

To help the poor, the hungry feed, To give coat and shoe, To see that all can write and read-There's work enough to do. The time is short-the world is wide,

And much has to be done. This wondrous earth and all its pride, Will vanish with the sun The moments fly on lightning wings, And life's uncertain too. We ve none to waste on foolish things-There's work enough to do.

The planets, at their Ma'cer's will, Move onward to their cars. For nature's wheel is never still-Progressive as the stars! The leaves that flutter in the air, And summer breezes woo. One solemn truth to man declare— Ther 's work enough to do.

Who then can sleep when all around Is active fresh and free? Shall man-creation's lord-be found Less busy than the bee? Our courts and alleys are the field, If men would search them through, The best the sweets of labor yield And work enough to do

Mrs. Jones' Trials.

Mr. Jones was married. He had been married a long time-ever since he could remember, almost. The first Mrs. Jones was a pretty school-boy love, and died early. Mr. Jones was inconsolable for more than six months, and then finding the burden of ing friend. The connection was a happy proportion of her maternal tears, "I am glad he is doing well," she said, came extremely lonely and having the haband bereaved affections to Miss Patience wait. Norcross, a mature lady of thirty. We have said that Mr. Jones had a habit of being married, and it had so grown upon him, that, had Providence opened the way, he would in all probability have followed up a series of bereavements with a succession of consolations. But in selecting Miss Patience he had no regard to compatibility of temper. He had never thought anything about it. His other marriages had been happy incidents, and so far as he knew and reflected that was the order of nature. But in accordance with her name, for it was a lailing that she leaned to virtue's side and beyond it. She lived in the remote and the future. The present with her was never anything but a makeshift, a mere temporary expedient till better times. Distance not only lent enchantment to her objects of pursuit, but was at solutely the only charm which she was sensitive. She really liked Mr. Jones almost up the hour of his proposals; she meekly tolerated him ever

They were boarding for a time, and the wife said submissively to all of her friends, "Oh, yes, it is very comfortable for the present till we feel able to keep house.'

Mr. Jones, after the remark had been reiterated for the fiftieth time, asserted that he was able to keep house. To prove this, he engaged and furnished a tasteful tenement, and another year saw Miss Patience the patient mistress of her own fireside. What a pleasant situation!" said Dame

Mrs. Jones sighed, "it will take so long in building;" and from that hour every rational enjoyment was deferred till they should get into their new dwelling. There were the usual delays and disappointments, and Mrs. Jones' love of endurance was fully gratified; she was regaled with lingering

Mr. Jones smoked his prime cigar on the back piazza, and grew to look portly and contented. Not so with Mrs. Jones.
